New Police Bill concessions

By Julian Haviland, Political Editor

Independent assessors will for the first time supervise the investigation of complaints against the police, under the terms of the revised Police and Criminal Evidence Bill to be published on Thursday. The Bill will also require all police questioning of suspects to be tape-recorded. Un-recorded evidence will not be admissable in court. These two major changes in the Government's proposals are among several made by Mr Leon Brittan, who took over as Home Secretary from Lord Whitelaw in June.

The main stop-and-search provisions of the Bill, waich fell at the dissolution of Parliament, will be retained. Nor will there be any change in the clauses to allow a person suspected of a serious arrestable offence to be detained in police custody without subject to magistraes' warrants.

As a further step, which ministers hope will reduce public anxiety about extending police powers to stop and search, the Government will also on Thursday publish White Paper proposals to remove the power of pros-ecution from the police in England and Wales.

It is believed they have opted for a national system of public prosecutors centrally employed and funded, as recommended hy a Home Office working party. It would follow the lines of the existing Scottish system.

Much of the opposition to the Bill debated in the last Parliament was based on the inability of the Government to say when independent prosecution and the recording of evidence would be established. Experimental recording has been done by several police forces for some time, but the Home Office is still unable to say when forces throughout the country will be equipped and ready to make the practice general and no commencement date will be in the revised Bill. The changes proposed in the police complaints procedure stop short of the demends of campaigners that lay people should join in the investigations.

Ministers remain convinced that outsiders would be ineffective because they would not get the necessary cooperation from

Tomorrow Mr Kinnock will or the first time face Mrs atcher during Prime Minister's question time as Leader of the Opposition. A great deal of psychological significance has come to attach to these twice-

They do not matter except that politicians and, one must acknowledge, political journal-ists believe that they matter. So the outcome affects morale on the backbenches on both sides

Over the years the Prime Minister of the day has usually established an ascendancy. The only exception to that rule in recent times was during Sir Alec Douglas-Home's premier-ship from 1963-1964, when Mr Harold Wilson came out on top nore often than not.

When Mr Wilson became Prime Minister he preserved his dominance against Sir Alec and then Mr Heath. But once Mr Heath entered No 10 he progressively established his authority over Mr Wilson at question time.

After they exchanged offices again in 1974, however, the advantage at question time was transferred between them as well, which suggests that it is indeed possession of the office that matters. That has been confirmed by Mrs Thatcher's experience. Her ascendancy at mestion time came only after the became Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister of the day, whoever it may be, goes into the fray every Tuesday and Thurs-day with two immense assets: the confidence that comes from having won the last election which matters a great deal in this theatrical form of personal combat; and the meticulous preparation of the Civil Service. If he is to win the day the Leader of the Opposition aceds to have a very sharp wit and do

at attack

But he does not have to defeat the Prime Minister often at question time in order to win the pext election. Mr Wilson, Mr Heath and Mr Callaghan were all rejected at the polls after dominating Prime Minister's questions, and Sir Alec Dougclose to winning after being frequently worsted at question avoid being beaten too hadly too often at the despatch box.

So, a number of Mr Kinnock's colleagues are advising him to play it cool at question time, to limit his interventions to short, precise, low-key ques-tions, unless he is sure that he is on very firm ground for an assault. Above all, he must avoid the danger of being repulsed humiliatingly after charging it with arms flailing.

It is sound advice. Yet it will not be easy to follow because it may not be compatible with what must be Mr Kinnock's broader tactical approach.
"I am afraid I shall bave to show myself very vicious, Mr Asquith, this session", Bonar Law said as they walked side by side in the procession at the opening of Parliament in 1912 after he had been elected leader of the Conservatives. "I hope you will understand".

If Mr Kinnock were ever to be tempted to speak to Mrs Thatcher with such frank naivety he would probably say much the same thing, although without the hint of an apology. Like Bonar Law, he has just assumed the leadership of a badly demoratized opposition party that is seriously divided over its own policies. Like Bonar Law, attack is for Mr

Kinnock the best way both to reinvisorate and unite his Indignation will be his weapon

He demonstrated that technique to good effect in his principal speech to the Labour conference at Brighton. It is evident again in Labour's sistence on a parliamentary debate this week on the health

Mr Kinnock will want to concentrate on berating the Government for its failures, real and imagined. It is what he does best, and it is what his supporters will most want to hear at this stage. It is much easier for them to agree on what the Government is doing wrong than on what a future Labour government should do Mr Kinnock's purpose will be served best for the most part by an aggressive style. Indignation and mockery will be his instruments. It is only at question time that he may find that unrestrained attack is liable to hurt him more than it hurts her. But will be be able to adjust his parliamentary style to suit the occasion? And if he does so, will he be able to satisfy the backbeachers behind him who will be lusting for combat?

It all began earlier this year when the NEGS published research on examination results which indicated that children at selective schools (grammar and secondary moderns) performed better than those in comprehen-sives. The research found that secondary modern pupils did particularly well.

Based on 2,000 secondary schools in about a half of England's local authorities, the study indicated that pupils in the same social class had better results in some local education authorities than in others. The report's authors, Dr John Marks, Baroness Cox, and Dr Maciej Pomian-Srzednicki, refused to say where the money

Treasury seeks savings in energy industries

Mr Norman Fowler, Secretary of State for Social Services, has emerged victorious from two skirmishes with the Treasury over social security and health.

On social security, Fowler persuaded his Cabinet colleagues that cuts in jobless benefits would produce little savings, cause substantial hardship and run into major political opposition, including from within the ranks of backbench Tory MPs.

On health, he agreed to withdraw his bid for extrafunds, chiefly for underfinanced specialties such as mental health and geriatrics, in return for withdrawal of Treasury demands for cuts - although higher than planned pay costs will have to be offset by

SDP chief proposes local health tax

By Our Political Editor The proposal that elected strict health authorities should be empowered to raise part of their revenue by levying a local health tax as part of a local income tax is floated by Dr David Owen the Social

Democrat leader today. He argues that wage nego-tiations in the National Health Service should also be conducted locally. To the objection that that might be inflationary, with weaker bargaining units causing an upward spiral, he replies that a strong smaller and more responsive hargaining authority could also protect employment in its area with the support of its workforce.

Dr Owen's advocacy of decentralization in wage bargaining and economic management generally is a central theme in a 5,000 word competition of the SDP's economic thinking which he has written for the current issue of the newly-designed conartedly ournal Economic Affairs, journal, Econo published today.

Reluctant supergrass faces questions over murder of alleged IRA informer

The reluctant republican supergrass, Mr Robert Lean, who retracted allegations who retracted allegations against 28 people, is being questioned by detectives about the murder of another alleged informer almost three years ago.

Mr Lean, aged 37, is, according to his wife Geraldine, about to be charged with murder on the word of another informer. She claimed her husband, who was initially implicated by William Skelly, was named by him again on the day he withdrew his evidence. Mrs Lean a mother of five, said she had not seen her husband since his arrest minutes after telling a press conference how he fled from police "minders" and had been intimidated into making statements against republicans. She said: "Bobby's solicitor, who had been to see him, came to me and told me he was going to be charged with murder, I expected the RUC to do something like this."

Lean had been given immun-ity from any crimes he admitted but the latest matter is not covered by that agreement. Eleven people, including two leading republicans, Ivor Bell and Edward Carmichael, had charges against them withdrawn after Lean's retraction. He was first named

William Skelly, an alleged informer, earlier this summer and according to Mrs Lean, he made a further statement after her husband made an affidavit withdrawing his statement against the 28 men and women. It is understood Mr Lean is being questioned about the murder of Patrick Trainor, aged 28, who was shot dead by the Provisional IRA in February 1981 for allegedly giving infor-mation to the security forces.

While the RUC have faced embarrassment over Mr Lean's retraction particularly as he was portrayed as "potentially very significant", the fact that he in now being questioned about another matter indicates they intend to continue with the policy. The fact that he has apparently been named for the second time by an alleged disruption and uncertainty that the tactic has caused within

Vine scourge turns into 'non-event'

To date, according to the Ministry of Agriculture, the aphid has attacked only two vines, both in private gardens. One is at Acle in Norfolk, the other in the outskirts of Swindon, Wiltshire.

The Swindon vine suffered most, with galls on the underside of the leaves and small dark knotty root galls.

The Acle vine was affected only by the leaf gall and both infestations have been cradicated by the ministry. So far no commercial vineyards have been attacked and it seems unlikely that any will be for the mansion that people no longer want machines which play games only. They want computers which can perform other func-tions. Thus when the price of home computers fell so did sales of games machines.

But analysts point out that the markets in Britain and the US are surprisingly different. In Britain computers rather than games machines always made the running, thanks to the lowcost hardware from Sir Clive Sinclair. Although they are still used mainly for game-playing they have full micro-computing facilities.

While the US was working from small business computers down to the home market, Britain was developing both equally, leaving little room for games-only machines.

Benefits for the unemployed in Britain are a lower proportion of earnings than in any other leading Western country and have fallen sharply over the past decade, according to a study by the United Nations published in the September issue of Economic Bulletin for

The report will provide useful ammunition for Mr Norman Fowler, the beleaguered Secretary of State for Social Services, as he tries to fight off Treasury demands for cuts in Portuge unemployment benefits as part of its search for reductions in public spending.

The study also disputes the claims of some right-wing economists, notably Professor Patrick Minford of Liverpool University, who believe that high benefits are responsible for oushing up unemployment in

It says that for most countries benefits are the same or lower in relation to previous earnings than they were 10 years ago. "Unemployment benefits have nine-tenths in France. had little to do will the increase in unemployment since 1974, and especially with the large increase since 1979", it says.

A married worker with three children in Britain would receive less than half his work ncome if he lost his job, the UN economists calculate. In the United States such a worker would lose a third of his for a single worker. Elsewhere replacement ratios are little changed, it says.

But despite low benefits, the cost of unemployment to the Exchequer is greater in Britain than in other leading industrial countries, equivalent between 11 and 17 per cent of

That reflects a higher level of unemployment than elsewhere and a heavy loss of revenue from income tax and national insurance contributions foregone. For a single worker, the exchequer loses £3 in taxes for every £1 paid out in benefits the study says.

Crucial test today for the Israeli economy

From Christopher Walker Jerusalem

The new Israeli Govern-ment's efforts to restore confi-dence in the shattered economy will face a major test this morning when the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange is due to reopen

Members of the public have been repeatedly ex-orted by senior ministers not to indulge in panic-selling when trading resomes. Efforts have been concentrated on trying to avera total collapse in the market for shares in the main Israeli commercial banks.

In dependent economics experts have predicted that bank shares - which in recent months have become the most popular hedge against three figure inflation - will fall in value by about 30 per cent when trading resumes

Apart from the plight of tens of thousands of Israeli investors who put their savings into bank shares, the banks themselves are estimated to town some £800m

Grief-stricken Marines search smoking ruins

Within minutes of the two Beirut blasts that annihilated more than 160 American and French members of the peacekeeping force, ROBERT FISK was at the carnage scenes. He sent The Times this chilling report:

The bodies of 10 marines were lined up on the ground behind a broken Jeep, neatly laid out as if they were on some kind of parade, their faces covered by tarpaulin sheets, their bare feet, black with dust, poking incongrously from the

One of the sheets had fallen away and the body beneath was quite naked, but still covered in thick dust. They lay there, ignored by the men still

From the curtains of brown and white smoke that rose funereally behind them came the regular, gloomy thump of underground explosions as the heavy ammunition dump deep beneath the ruins of the American Marines' battalion headquarters began to explode.

A tunnel of fire 20ft high spurted out of the rubble, and when a shell detonated itself across part of the airport, the three Marine guards standing nearest us threw themselves to

Three die in clash over Lebanese arms cache

From Christopher Walker Jerusalem Three Lebanese civilians

were killed, a number injured and one Israeli soldier wounded yesterday in the worst outbreak of violence in several months between the occupying Israeli Army and residents of southern

According to the version of events provided by Israel's military command, the violence crupted after Israeli soldiers discovered a large arms cache in a private house near the village of Sarafand, south of the Zahrani river.

The Army claimed that groups of rioting villagers weilding knives, iron bars and heavy objects menaced the Israelis as they attempted to arrest residents of the house. Israeli military reinforcements were brought in.

Details of how the three Lebanese were killed were not given

Meanwhile, the severity of the bombings of the multinatio-nal force in Beirut overshadowed yeserday's regular session of the Israeli coalition Cabinet and prompted one senior minister to hint of indirect Soviet involvement

Israel radio reported that Dr Joseph Burg, the Interior Minister, said after the meeting that it seemed that what he described as "the long hand of Moscow" had been involved. He also described the attacks as an incentive for a quick return to stability and pacification in Lebanon. Dr Burg's remarks were interpreted as suggesting poss-ible Syrian involvement in the bombings. Mr Dan Meridor, the Cabinet secretary, referred to an ton Post which he said had quoted Middle East experts as summing-up the latest US Administration's attitude to events in the region. The Syrians were said to be not interested in the peace process, but were waiting for more Marines to be killed so that the US would tire of remaining and leave Syria to "take over the whole show".

Among ordinary Israelis, there was a widely-voiced fear that the loss of so much American life might prompt the Reagan Administration to withdraw the Marines, thereby leading indirectly to possible renewed Israeli involvement in the area north of the Awali river, to which the Army had

Forty years of military coups

Caught in a vicious circle of instability

Next Sunday, Argentina goes to the polls in the country's first general elections for 10 years Andrew Thompson, in the first of three articles, reports from Buenos Aires on the difficulties facing the politicians.

Perhaps the key issue in Argentina's, elections is whether the victorious presidential candidate will last the six-year term in office.

Six-year term in annee.

Success, in simple terms, will be an historic feat. In the past 40 years, Argentina has had 19 presidents, and the number is still higher if one counts the frequent caretaker presidents. frequent caretaker presidents who hasted only a few weeks in the midst of political crises. Of the 19, 11 were army generals who reached power through military cours. The average term in office was just under three years. Only one president lasted the full constitutional terms General Juan Domingo Pacific from 1936 to 1952. Peron from 1946 to 1952.

Perin from 1946 to 1952.

The victors circle of instability is widely recognized as being central to Argentina's postwar decline. M. Alair Rouquie, a French political scientist specializing in contempory Argentine history, said recently at a seminar in Buenos. recently at a seminar in Buenos.

The world is a changed place.

Yes, there's always been economic turbulence and the sudden natural disaster.

The perils of revolution and Even the risks of bankruptcy and bank failure may be old risks.

But never before have factors like these fed one another to such a degree.

Never before has the exporter been threatened on such a scale.

Take claims on ECGD policies as one Last year, more than £580 million were paid out to exporters insured by ECGD. An increase of 92% on the year before. Well over nine times the amount paid out six years ago.

And a breakdown of this record figure shows that private buyers in traditionally stable markets are being hit as well as governments in more volatile countries.

So, is this an attempt to undermine exporters' confidence?

On the contrary, ECGD is a government body set up in 1919 to provide the security which lets businesses act positively in the world's marketplace.

For an average premium of just 58p per £100 of goods or services, you get a unique kind of safety net.

It guarantees you 90 to 95% of your money if an overseas customer or country fails to meet its obligation to pay.

In addition, an ECGD policy may help you obtain better rates of interest for export finance from your bank manager.

The catch?

There isn't one. More than ten thousand exporters a year of every shape and size have found that even red tape is cut to the absolute minimum.

Of course, you can continue to gamble that because you've got by to date, you'll survive tomorrow.

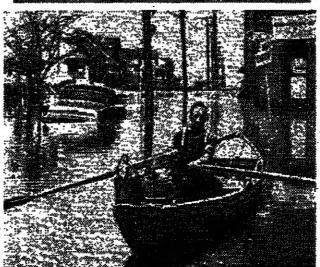

But at what odds?

Yozoslavia and Greece are today exploring the outlook for bilateral and multilateral cooperation in the Balkans against a background of rising East-West tensions which are already casting a heavy shadow in the region. Mr Milka Planinc, the Yugoslav Prime Minister, who is here on an official visit, had a long meeting with her Greek op-posite number, Mr Andreas Papandreou, on arrival yesterday: Discussions were to con-tinue today.

A dominant theme in the talks was Mr Papandreouis initiative for a Balkan conference in Thems next January to consider plans for a nuclear-free zone in the area. However, Bulgaria's implied threat to deploy Soviet missiles if Pershing 2 and Cruise missiles are installed in Europe, could cause the plan to collapse.

It was the Yugoslavs who had "cautioned" Mr Papandreou against Bulgaria's intentions by pointing out the existence of missile launching pads in that country, which could easily be converted into a Soviet nuclear base within hours.

The Greeks have since received intelligence that rail-borne Soviet missiles could be ferried across the Black Sea within 11 hours to Bulgaria and positioned on special trucks that would fire the narrower Testing time: Holdfire's dampers triumph under fire.

Fire at sea is a particularly hazardous affair. Especially far out in the North Sea, where Shell's platforms are pumping oil and gas.

If we dialled 999, we'd wait a long time. We're left very much to our own devices. And one such device is the damper.

Dampers are valves which, in the unlikely event of a fire, stop flames and fumes spreading along pipes and air shafts.

When we first set up shop in the world's cruellest sea, no dampers had been designed for such a hostile environment.

Enter a group of bright sparks, aptly named Holdfire, from landlocked Cheltenham.

They'd been making dampers for office blocks. Now they headed out to sea on a venture that might have sunk an outfit ten times their size.

Virtually overnight, in an operation that bore witness to British enterprise at its most tenacious, a new generation of damper was born. Dampers forged from new grades of steel, impervious to hell or high water. Automated dampers triggered by smoke and fire detection systems with the keenest of senses.

In coming to our aid, Holdfire set new standards for the fire prevention industry. So much so that new tests had to be devised for them to pass.

For their efforts, they received far more by way of reward than a mere pat on the bank balance from Shell.

Back on dry land, they found that their new designs could be turned to countless new uses worldwide: in a paper mill in Sweden, in a gas pumping installation in Germany, in several hospitals in England, to name but a few.

Orders keep coming in, from Japan to Saudi Arabia. In fact, since Holdfire joined us in the North Sea they've grown ninefold. You could say they're spreading like wildfire.

There was therefore no scope for There was therefore to scope for a court to hold it invalid. That was so in spite of In re a Judgmen Debtor ([1908] 2 KB 474) which held that a bankruptcy notice had pend consequences and as regarded substantial matters had to be strictly construct; that a notice calculated to the strictly construct; the satisfaction of the court. It was the satisfaction of the court. It was difficult to see how that admittedly seldom used method could be implemented within the 10-day time limit allowed. His Lordship considered that saide.

My Justice Niebolls agreed.

Court of Appeal

Late amendment of claim disallowed on appeal

The Court of Appeal (Lord Justice Waller, Lord Justice Stade and Lord Justice Robert Goff) on October 18, allowed, a defendant's interlocutory appeal against a mill judge's decision to allow an amendment to a statement of claim on the first day of the trial.

The plaintiff, who was the defendant's you, sought to set aside a transfer of property when he sold a house to the defendant in 1971 for $4,800 after being advised by a solicitor who acted on behalf of both parties.

The plaintiff's original claim was The plaintiff's original claim was that he was of pusound mind at the time of the sale. On the morning of the irial the plaintiff sought leave to amend the pleadings by relying on the additional grounds of pudne influence and an unconsciousable bergain. The judge exercised his discretion in the plaintiff's favour and allowed the amendment.

Even for a young man with ambitions to become a poet, National Service in the late 1940s offered more than absurdity and boredom. For Philip Oakes, there were opportunities to see Greece and Egypt, to take a further step into the world of journalism and to meet kindred literary spirits. In the first of three extracts from the forthcoming final volume of his autobiographical trilogy, he describes a memorable encounter with an unlikely recruit which began on his very first day in the Army, before he had even drawn his kit or quaked at a sergeant's oath

Go home, virgin soldier

At the end of my first week in the Army ordered to report to Warley Barracks I dropped my rifle during arms drill in Essex by 3pm. Waiting for the train Between the orders for Slope and T saw several other solitary figures Between the orders for Slope and Present Arms my fingers lost their grip and my Browning 303 ("The soldier's best friend," the sergeant instructor advised) clattered to the tarmac.

The sergeant, a weary veteran of the Rhine Army, turned his head and studied the skyline. His demob number was coming up soon and, as he frequently reminded us, all he wanted to do was serve the rest of his time without drama, cock-ups or the necessity of having to put any of us on a nursing suitcases and guessed rightly that they too were bound for the Army. We identified ourselves and crammed into one compartment.

There was a trainee solicitor's clerk, builder's labourer, a barber, an electrician's mate, an accountant and a boy who sat in the opposite corner hugging a brown paper parcel. He was either shy or frightened, I thought. Although it was early April and still chilly he wore no overcoat, only a thin black sweater with holes at each elbow.

"What's your name?" I asked. He shied away as if I had threatened him with my fist. "David."

"Is that your surname?" He shook his head. "David Williams." D'you come from London?"

"Holloway." "I've been living at Highbury," I said. "That's just five minutes away.

He did not seem at all interested. "I live with my mum. And my dog. They shouldn't have got me to come." He quivered all over as if someone. He looked around him indignantly

"Didn't we all," said the barber, whose name was Sims.

"My mum didn't want me to go" said Williams. "She told the bobby when he came. But he said I had to. They were going to lock me up otherwise...

It was like listening to an event being described by a small child who understood nothing of what had occurred. "Everybody gets called up", I said. "You're not being treated any differently."

"He shook his head: "I was up all night with the dog. He kept crying. He knew I was going off."
What sort of dog is it?"

"Brown", he said.
"What breed?" He shook his head again. "He's called Prince."

For the rest of the journey he remained silent and when we piled into the long which took us to the barracks he squarted on the floor and stared at

Over the next couple of hours I saw Williams being shouted at, herded into line, and once being led by his hand from one desk to another by a succession of NCOs. "You're going to get a lot of that."
"No I won't", he said. "I shall tell my mum. She'll put a stop to it."

I looked at him sharply, half expecting to catch the last flicker of a grin. But he seemed completely serious. There was no trace of a smile. He clasped the brown paper parcel to his chest and I caught the whiff of moth balls.

"What's in there?" "My things." "What things?"

"Combinations. They were my dad's. My mum says I have to wear them," He peeled back one edge of the parcel and showed me layers of yellowwool, seeded with small rubber buttons.

"You can't wear combs in the army", I said. "They won't let you." Williams carefully remade his parcel. "I didn't want to come here in the first place", he said. "It's their fault if it all goes wrong."

level of inefficiency which seemed likely to establish a record. Like me he dropped his rifle, not once but a dozen times. Without effort he could disrupt a morning's drill by failing, again and again, to distinguish his right foot from his left.

He was banned from grenade practice after the sergeant had to prise the grenade from his hand and hurl it into the sand pit where it exploded with only seconds to spare. He was denied leave. He spent hours in sweeping the barracks and toiling through cookhouse fatigues. He lost his small pack, his best battledress and his pay book. While the rest of the intake gradually began to resemble soldiers, boning their boots and weighting their trouser bottoms with lead bracelets so that they hung evenly over their gaiters, Williams continued to look irrevocably

He lacked co-ordination. His beret refused to remain on the tilt over his right eye, but rode back over his curls to form a halo around his unworried face. He was abused, nagged and finally ignored, but he did not complain except to remind his critic that his mum would soom sort things out if she was there.

"Did you see your mum?"

I shook my head. "I've already told you, She doesn't live in London, I went to see my girlfriend." Don't you want to see your mum?"

"I'd love to but there wasn't time." "My mum's the only person in the world I want to see", said Williams. "It won't be long now." He almost crooned the words as if constant repetition had turned them into liturgy. I smoothed my blankets and made hospital corners. "Let's hope you're right", I said. He smiled swiftly and secretly. "I'm right", he said. "Don't worry about that."

We were given news of our postings in the last week of the course. I had been turned down not only for the paratroops but also by the War Office Selection Board. 'Let's face it, you're not exactly officer material", said the lieutenant who had thrown down his swagger stick during arms drill. Instead, I was to join the RASC as a clerk. So was Sims and so was Dollimore. They were both disgusted.

"What's happened to Williams?" asked Dollimore:

We found him in the barrack room packing his brown paper parcel into a new fibre-board suitcase. He wore a skimpy tweed suit and a shirt patterned with thin red stripes. A trilby hat was perched on the back of his head and a raincoat was folded neatly across the bottom of his bunk. "I'm going home", he said. "They've discharged me."

Dollimore whistled softly.

"He'd have signed one for you", said

Sims. "Quick as a flash." Williams nodded. "I expect he would. But there's no need now.

"Will your mum be all right?" I Williams fastened the lock on his suitcase and draped the raincoat over his arm. "There's nothing wrong with my mum. All she needs is me and all I need is her. I've always told you that."

We watched him cross the parade ground. In the distance stood the lieutenant, quivering in anticipation of a salute. Within seconds he realized that the approaching target was a civilian, but before he could retreat Williams swept off his hat and made a low bow. "Jammy bugger", said Dollimore again.

Like many cult heroes before him. Tom Waits is good at keeping himself well hidden: cults go better with an enigma at the core. He is not much to look at: you would never notice him in the street - a sallow equine, face in which pale eyes dart suspiciously, a body like a rubber-plant clad in cheap shirt and trousers. Only the misshapen pork-pie hat might snag a thread of attention. He is recognisable by sight only to his followers, who approach him with the kind of aweful reverence of the unclean towards the divine.

It is his voice that chiefly makes him out, a rasp so rough and slow that his speech sounds like a drunk snoring into the bottom of an empty pint pot, and his singing like the rumble of the shingle in the rip e said, detecting a suggestion that his might not be the purest of lyrical sing opera again. low-life scenes and delivering ugly thoughts, a voice darkly stained by full ashtrays and empty glasses. Such is the stuff of the songs Tom Waits writes. With a touch of Kerouac and hobos who never got a dime ahead, he sings of lost souls in one-night cheap hotels, of gusts of lust in the corner of the party and of married men in the suburbs setting fire to their mortgaged houses and driving away. Long after he was presumed to have been swept from the gutter, the white Negro of the American Fifties jives on in the figure and the career of Tom Waits. He has so thoroughly assumed the manner-isms and interests of the Beat Generation that he is now its living representative on earth. He is undoubtedly as good a poet of the low life as any of the many seen in America, with the advantage that he can, at will put his hand on and make use of all the varieties and idioms of American popular music.

Some of his tunes are so immediately familiar that they of the tide. Land of dreamy scenes

The Americans have the lovable habit of always claiming the biggest or deepest most lovable. I'm writing these words in Baton Rouge, which has the tallest state capitol in America, built by Huey Long. who was probably the most colourful state governor of all time and certainly the most interesting to be assassinated during 1935. As if this were not enough, the guidebook claims that "while the Baton Rouge area is known for its petrochemical industries and the busy port, many people don't know that the city is also a producer of extra fine quality dirt, a reference to local gravel and not to Louisiana politics.

Aorgan City, on the edge of Gulf of Mexico, does not look like an obvious tourist attraction, but this does not prevent the tour guide from telling you that "Morgan City has it all: seafood, boats, oil and charm", which is another way of saying that it is an oil harbour with restaurants. It is the only city Lhave ever met which has an annual Shrimp and Petroleum Festival. It also has three world first to its creidt – in 1947 in launched the very first offshore oil drill, in 1933 the first jumbo shrimp was landed here and in 1917 it was the location of the world's first Tazzan, movie. Morgan City is the stuff of which quiz questions are made.

So is Thibodaux, a Cajun town which boasts America's largest volunteer fine department, with more than 500 voluntary firemen and, I would guess, not nearly enough fires to go round.

New Iberia, another Cajun town enriched by oil, has what seems to be the deepestsalt deposits in the state, as well as the world's only tabasco sauce factory. But its most amazing possession is a Roman statue, fully 7ft tall, of the Emperor Hadrian. Quite why the Iberia Savings & Loan Association decided to buy it is not entirely clear. But there he stands in a glass case, fully air-conditioned and surrounded by ferns. As the guidebook-puts it, New Iberia boasts the only full. length statue of the Emperor Hadrian anywhere in the USA, a claim which is unlikely to be contested in our lifetime.

Some of Louisiana's claims are complicated by the American fondness for moving houses around the landscape. There is a house in north east Louisiana. which was built in 1722 and was believed to be the oldest structure in north east Louisiana if not the whole of the Mississippi Basin. Last week its new-owner moved it to New Iberia, so it is now the oldest house in south west-Louisiana, and the north-eastern record is held by some younger house.

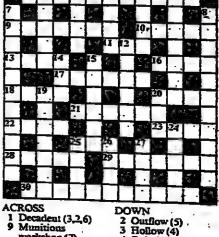

Unfortunately, during the move its 60-tonne weight of the bouse proved too, much for a small country bridge (weight, limit 2 ½ tonnes) and the bridge collapsed. For a while it was the oldest house sitting in a river anywhere in the world

Personally, I am most impressed by Louisiana's drinking laws, which are not so well publicized in the guidebook. Whereas most states will take you out and have you shot if you have so much as an opened bottle in your car, the people of Louisiana can quite legally drink and drive at the same time, by which I mean with the wheel in one hand and a bottle in the other. Last Sunday an inhabitant was spotted driving home from the football game in New Orleans with a beer in one hand, the wheel in another and his left leg-dangling out of the window. It was a good thing the New: Orleans Saints lost, if they'd won he would have had both legs out of the:

Solution to Saturday's prize puzzle will appear on

sideways look at the British way of life

The American is a hopeless club man. He gets too familiar with the staff, and when the staff respond in kind, he slaps them down. It is a relationship with which he cannot cope. The Frenchman is no better, as he does not function socially without a woman. The Italian male is a dead loss since he does not even enjoy the company of his own kind. How's that for a piece of British bigotry? Quite fair, except that the obervations were not made on British soil. Far from it; they are the considered views of someone who ran a well-known club in. Tokyo. No matter, the truth is acknowledged globally, and can be summarized as: only the British gentleman knows how to belong to a club. This is a fact which, being as irrefutable as the law of gravity, has beggared analysis. So, before attempting an explanation, it may be as well simply to record that the club as an institution, far from receding amid recession, has proved exceptionally durable.

Take for example the Garrick, favoured by the literary and theatrical fraternities. Number of full members, 950; annual subscription, £316; waiting list, six years. Or Boodles: entrance fee, £200; subscription, £285; waiting list, three years. Or the Savile: membership 900, subscription £225 which last year had a surplus of £20,000 and 200 more members than six years ago.

But want a moment. Whatever happened to the Guards, the Devonshire, the Bath and Constitutional? The first, as befits an assiciation of old soldiers, did not exactly die, but rather faded into a merger with the Cavalry, while the second joined the East India. The others gave up the ghost, victims of rising costs and falling rolls. Perhaps it is true that the survivors have endured partly because of the application of more professional management. In pre-war days the finances were infinitely simpler, overheads were usually covered by subscriptions, with extra income from food and

Now the field is not only leaner but, because of the experience of the past decade, better conditioned to survival. Street-wise if you like. It may not be apparent to members (something would be amiss if it were), but the successful clubs today depend on modern and efficeint accountancy far removed from the benign amateurishness of 40 years ago. Beleaguered clubs may have to look no further than their own membership for the reason; old gents clinging at all costs to a house style that is by infiltration of youth precisely because it is young.

One must go back to the eighteenth-century coffee-house for the origins of the club; already political and artistic sectarianism was in evidence. Whigs went to St James Coffee House, Tories to the Cocoa Tree Chocolate House, while the literati repaired to Will's and the clergy to Truby's. In those days of course, such institutions were conduits of news as much as anything else, a function which the business columns of the press. were soon to assume. As such, the houses were more egalitarian than their modern counterparts; certainly there was a higher incidence of strangers.

There is a paradox in the club's inheritance of those democratic impulses. Although professional status is a thing to be left on the pavement, there is a sense in which the very existence of the place runs counter to the notion of an open house. All may be delightfully equal to those inside, but to the outsider, rightly or wrongly, the club comes across an an institution with a quasi-Masonic

This is an image hotly disputed by the clubs apologists. They will tell you there is nothing sinister about a haven of kindred spirits, and that anyway the changes since the days of the coffeehouse mean that commercial intercourse has been all but outlawed. To paraphrase one club secretary: you may talk shop, but not business; one member may discuss with another the shortcomings of the judiciary, but if he were to ask for specific advice course an actor may talk theatre with a memberwho happens to be a director. He could hardly fail to do so. But touting for parts? That would be another matter altogether.

All of which does not bring us any nearer to knowing why the modern Englishman remains so eminestly clubbable. One view is that the middle and upper class male, fed as he still is through a segregated system of education, is schooled to perpetuate and flourish in such climates. Few of the clubs whose secretaries belong to the Club Secretaries' Management Association offer full membership to women, even though, with the notable exception of White's, they see the necessity of admitting female guests so that the men are not alienated.

This second-class citizenship offered by the chibs - through sufferance not suffrage - is something that irks professional women, and not

Watch out then for the Groucho Club, named after the famous Marx Brother who said he would never join one that would have him as a member. It is due to open next year and aims to fill the need left unmet by the "sexist" institutions. The founding fathers/mothers include the chairman of Faber, the editor of The Bookseller and two very forceful women from the publishing world. The co-ed format could be a winner (even if it does not lure the fellows away from the Athenaeum.) Remember, it is catching on at Oxford.

PERSONALITY CHANGE

Cyril Ray, (right) journalist, member of the Athen aeum, Brooks's, MCC, Special and University (Dublin), the Hove Club

The Athenaeum and Brooks's are the only serious clubs I belong to. No club has kept exactly the personality it had when first founded. There's hardly one -White's and Boodle's are exceptions - that hasn't amalgamated or been swallowed up by others, chiefly for financial reasons. The whole of social life has changed.

Most of the clubs we are talking about were created when all services were grossly underpaid and we're still living in that atmosphere. People still grumble when subscriptions go up but we've never paid enough for our clubs. I was elected to the Athenaeum in 1956 when the subscription was 25 guineas a year. How absolutely absurd to think of that huge palace being kept waiting for you, cleaned, furbished and repaired for 10 shillings a week! Or today, when in Brooks's you have a beautiful Henry Holland house in St James's kept for your pleasure for £5

The Americans know better they've always paid high subscriptions and the best run clubs in the western world are in the United

I used to belong to White's as well. Walking down St James's one evening I met an old chum and asked him to come and have a drink in White's. After a while the secretary came up to me in the bar and mumbled "Excuse me, my Lord, could I have a word ... do you know you are no longer a member?" I was amazed, so he scurried away and came back with a letter regretting that I could no longer afford to be a member of two clubs. There was a beautiful forgery of my signature at the bottom. I had often discussed the matter with my wife, but had done nothing, so she had taken it into her own hands and cancelled my membership.

Am I a good club member? Absolutely not. A good one talks more. In that sense I'm a parasite, but a paying parasite.

> CONVIVIALITY Peter Aldersley, (left) secretary of the Savile Club

The word commercialization is still a dirty word in some clubs - but today a club has to be commercially run, to balance the books, in order to exist. I'm glad to say that the Savile has been more than self-sufficient in the last five or six years. Members join for totally different reasons from those that applied before the war when it was almost a social stigma not to belong to a club. And to be black-balled was a real social disgrace. (You'd have to be bad today to be expelled,

Nowadays people join clubs more for convenience than for social reasons - to have, if they work in London, somewhere to go to lunch or relax in the evenings; to have a club with valet service is a great advantage to someone who lives in the country, and of course we have members whose families have belonged to the Savile for gener-

We hope that the club will be in the heart of Bloomsbury, in Great Russell Street. We have found the premises and are having a feasibility study done - a financial breakdown looking at staffing, membership, subscriptions, all the practical

The idea of a club centred around publishers has been around for years. There is a lot of imperus now for the idea, which really started when a bunch of people were idly pondering the fact that there was not much in the way of suitable or consenial venues for out-of-office get togethers or launchings.

I see a lot of authors, writers, I don't like pubs and can't belong to existing clubs, either because I'm a woman or I don't want to. One wants a place where one is not only a member but has certain rights. where one can go and be welcomed, not admitted under sufferance. I do think some women feel very strongly about this - but, equally, women who feel that men should not be allowed are just as silly as those who implement the "men only" rule. We don't have to stoop to their level. It won't be exclusively.

I think I'm the youngest member the Garrick has ever had - I joined the club.10 years ago when I was 22. It was a wonderful night, we had a three-generation dinner; (My father and explores hour members and grandfather were both members and my father said I must join, it would be a great asset.) It's a wonderful place to take children I was taken for Sunday lunch as a child and often take my wife and six-year-old daughter now. It's not a real male domain. The essence of financial responsibility to one's club is to see that it is professionally managed. So many clubs, sadly, have ceased to exist. We've completely renovated our club in the past three or four years: old furniture replaced, new carpets, curtains, but the strongest complaint we've had was from a member who didn't approve of us removing tableclothes and having polished tables, as they do in most clubs!

I think application for membership to clubs is fairly static at the moment - though some have increased their membership. As far as letting ladies in, there are inevitably changes afoot, but a club as a private institution is entitled to make up its own mind.

ever received a hostile postbag was after I made an approving reference to readyprepared food. I had written that an outbreak of salmon

Kiev and damson sorbet on the Supermarket shelves meant that men who were out at work all day could occasionally feed their friends as elegantly as those women who stayed some.

Reading the outraged letters that soon arrived, I wondered whether my meaning had been misconstrued, leading readers to suppose that I was running an illegal mah-hong racket when I should have been making mayonnaise.

One letter-writer said that she couldn't imagine a more ghastly way to live than to go from dinner party to hive than to go from dinner party to dinner party being served the same shop-bought muck. She de-picted her own life as an endless round of gourmandizing – flitting, or more probably, waddling, from house to house, with Something Completely Different, involving nours of preparation, to eat at each

I find this odd. I too, from time to time, sit down at other people's different kinds of food, like different skirt lengths, go in and out of fashion.

Which watercress sauce, monkfish or vegetable terrine enters its hoyday, that is what you will get, whether you are being entertained in Swindon. Solikuit or St Austell, Michael Frayn verified this in his novel. michael Frayn Verned this in his acvel. Sweet Dreums, where the hexo is always given gigot d'agneau aux flageolets. Nothing wrong with that either. People go to their favourite restaurant to eat their favourite dish time and time again and make no end of a fuss if it's not on the menu.

We who have neither time nor inclination to cook, keep our fingers crossed that smoked tuna, which you can buy, will remain in fashion while cassoulet, which you can't, while cassoniet, which you can't, will go the way of tapioca pudding and stuffed swan.

The other criticism levelled against shop-bought cuisine is that it violates the laws of hospitality which insist that every hostess, whether housewife or career woman, chealth has a market heart a house wife or care. should be a martyr before the main event Angela Rippon once told me that she always started the prep-aration for a dinner party four days beforehand because "if you started to think about it at $12 o'clock on the day itself, it wouldn't be much of a compliment to your guests".

Well, I don't know about that, I certainly wouldn't feel slighted if they're as strong as they were a hundred years ago and will last for someone nipped out to raid Harrod's food hall minutes before my arrival instead of paying me the plain and wholesome simmering on the back burner days in advance.

Yet somehow food, clothes or home furnishings, is expected to be homemade. Did you make this yourself?" people rudely ask as they tuck into something perfectly delicious from the delicatessen and, in admitting that I did not, I feel both neglectful and profligate.

Even though I have earned the money, and thereby the right, to buy smoked haddock pate in little fluted paper dishes, I begin to feel hadly that I didn't do all that skinning and likeling and precise out needle like flaking and picking out needle-like bones myself. Maybe the first women who bought ready-to-wear clothes instead of making their own pin-tucks felt equally guilty.

Today, of course, it's perfectly all right to say you don't sew, for no one will suppose that because of this failing your children will go off to school dressed in rags. They will metely assume that you have an account at Mothercare. But just mention that you don't have time to make your own Christmas pudding and you will be made to feel that you are depriving your family of an indispensable emotional experience. It is only recently that we who shun the kitchen have dared to admit such bold behaviour.

What surprises me is that, in spite of the enormous sale of cookery books and the great popularity of TV programmes about cooking, everywhere I go I meet women who groan at the thought of all the meals they have already cooked and all themselves they have already cooked and all the meals they have already the statement of the s those they will not be able to avoid cooking in the future. I may have to start a nationwide support group,

Undiplomatic

A poignant scene at last week's farewell party for John Louis, the outgoing US Ambassador, at his London residence. Ted Heath and Lord Hailsham were seen to settle at opposite ends of a long, otherwise empty sofa, whereupon a loyal member of Mrs Thatcher's Cabinet was heard to mutter. "How's that for aisenic and old lace?"

Tory Island is a community of 160odd Gaelic-speaking souls getting by as best they can in the stormy Atlantic off the coast of Donegal. It is shaped a bit like ET, and to the sophisticated denizens of Strasbourg the priest-led delegation from Tory that recently descended upon the European Parliament seeking cash for urgently needed development must have seemed the next thing to an invasion from outer space. The Gaelic Thoraidhe carries strong conaotations of "robber" and "outlaw" and was first applied to the Irish Roman Catholics who opposed the English during the seventeenth century; its anglicized adoption by the Whigs to describe supporters of the Crown came later. Now they Tory folk are poor but honest fishermen and farmers, whose repeated calls for a suitable ferry service or financial help to build a safe harbour at Baile Thiar have earned them the support of the formidable Winnie Ewing, Scottish Nationalist MEP for the Highlands and Islands. The latest betting is that this improbable new Tory alliance will sweep to Eurocratic victory ere

Injured pride

My colleague Brian Jackman, who writes on travel and conservation for The Sunday Times, is the object of a subtle if belated pasting in this month's Oryx, the learned journal of the Fauna and Flora Preservation Society, for his book The Marsh Lions: the story of an African pride published by Hamish Hamilton last year. The reviewer is Norman Myers, a biologist who spent much of his working life in Kenya and achieved some notoriety a few years ago with his popular writings on the rate at which species and their habitats are vanishing one extinction every five minutes, an area the size of Printing House Square every three and a quarter hours, that sort of thing. In his review, Myers deftly deplores Jackman's device of "per-sonalizing" his lions by giving them names. "The story occasionally and explicitly wanders off into fiction, in order to fill 'gaps' in the epic story of the pride", he adds. Nor is Myers enamoured of the author's occasionally "over-florid" style: "Why should a hippo possess 'wickedly' jutting teeth, and why should a buffalo's horns feature a "vicious" curve? And what is a 'nation' of wildebeest?" The reviewer con-cludes that he will "treasure this book, for its style and spirit rather than for its substance". As a sometime connoisseur of conservationist bitchery, I shall treasure Myers' review for the same reasons.

In 1972 it destroyed the Peruvian fishing industry and last year's upwelling was "the most severe on record. Let's be realistic about Russia

by James Callaghan

Face to face with the Russians: Mr Callaghan meets the Soviet Foreign Minister, Andrei Gromyko, in Moscow last week,

The visitor to Moscow, after an absence of several years, at once notices that people in the street are more smartly dressed; there are more private cars about and traffic jams appear in the rush hour. The countryside is also changing. In one Sovkhoz an hour's drive from Volgograd, about half the villagers have built their own small homes with half an acre of land apiece. But the land is poor. Not even the 1,000 tractors and 100 combines can produce big-crops from virgin land, lacking humus, under-fertilized and short of rainfall. Yields are terribly

The familiar shortcomings of the Soviet economy are still present, as ministers will admit. But, for the first time, I heard more questioning about the best means to make the economy function well. Unless we in the West understand the way the Russians think about themselves, we are unlikely to devise successful policies. They are a tough, conservative, tenacious and patriotic people, with which goes a fierce nationalism. For the West to denounce publicly their leaders as evil men is not sufficient foundation for an effective western foreign policy. And as neither President Reagan nor Mrs Thatcher has any intention of launching a war to remove the system, they had better start to devise a less simplistic approach to regulating East-West relations in a highly dangerous only with what should be done, but with what can be done. In security matters, the dominant theme in Russian thinking is the scarring experience left by the Nazi invasion, with the enemy overrunning large tracts of territory to the gates of Lenigrad and almost to Moscow, millions dead and a scorched earth policy to win "The Patriotic War": President Roosevelt was affected by the total destruction of Stalingrad, with the loss of whole armies in the eight-month battle round the city, that the Americans roposed that the ruins be left as a permanent memorial to the horrors of war, and a new town be built

The Soviet leaders are determined that this must not happen again. And it has led them to an obsessive and excessive concern about their security and to sweep on one side those who might endanger it. As to equal status, the Soviet Union believes that, despite its economic shortcomings, it is the one country that can deploy the strength of a superpower and rank with the United States, in almost every conversation with Soviet officials, it to their relationship with the United States that discussions tend TO CETHIN.

France. West Germany and Britain are important countries in their struggle for influence. But they see us and the rest of the world, not always excluding China, as a function of Soviet-US relationships. They believed that they had won their claim to equal status when the Salt I agreement was signed in 1972, and they were disappointed when the US failed to ratify Salt II and Congress attempted to impose conditions upon them. This was seen as a challenge to their right to equal status. They are not likely to back down now, and this has important consequences for western arms control policy. The Russians deny our claim that the deployment of Pershing and cruise is a proper reply to the SS20. Although they would still like, if possible, to prevent this deployment from being ealized, they know there is little chance, and now their main preoccupation is to gauge the nature and extent of their response. In my view, this will be conditioned to some extent by the fact that the first batch of western missiles is small in number. They arknowledge that these moves and counter moves will complicate even further a complex situation and contain serious elements of danger. The sense of insecurity will be increased on both sides, and this will create uncertainty that will radiale from one to the other.

Notwithstanding, I believe it will still be possible to break the circle of scalation, even if the present Intermediate Nuclear Force talks break down. If both sides genuinely seek agreement, then procedurally there must be an end to making proposals from public platforms, and also an end to the semi-public disclosure of proposals made in private by the other side.

The essence of a successful negotiation would be that both sides emerged feeling that their security had been enhanced and not dimin-ished. The talks on intermediate range missiles will prove much more sticky than those on strategic arms. The situation will get worse before it gets better.

But in a strange way, the current deterioration in relations, together with the economic cost of arms escalation, may bring a greater sense of realism to both sides. If the present talks break down, then after a period of reflection both sides should come forward with new sets of proposals presented in private and negotiated without publicity. The Russians claim that they do not despair. "Pessimism and fatalism are brothers." In private conversation there is an absence of vittiol or ideology, and a willinghess to deal with arguments on their merits. As to relations between our own country and the Soviet Union, the British Government must be much more active in its diplomacy. This need not require us to temper

our disapproval of the Soviet attitude towards human rights, dissidents or Jewish emigration. Across the Channel, both France and Germany are as firm as we are, but they have not stood in the way of visits by Chancellor Kohl to Moscow or of Mr Gromyko to Paris. As a consequence, Britain stands lower in the batting order than our two neighbours, and our views are taken less into account. The result of the recent stridency of British Government speeches is that Britain cannot immediately resume re-lations at the same high level as France and Germany. But we can initiate talks at certain levels, and conduct a dialogue on a wide range of political issues.

Then there is trade. The British Airways plane on which I returned home carried a number of British businessmen who had been engaged in the arduous task of seeking business in the Soviet Union. The find the going tough, and the state of our political relationship makes it no easier. Nevertheless, high ranking Soviet officials were ready to volunteer, even before I asked, that good opportunities exist for increas-ing Anglo-Soviet trade, and I deduce that the Conservative Government had gained at least some good marks because of its attitude towards the pipeline sanctions of a year ago.

My visit was well worthwhile. For a few days it directed Soviet attention to British views at a high evel and efter too long an absence It was possible to argue difference in a logical, rational way, and that process should continue.

The massive demonstrations held throughout Europe last Saturday were impressive in their demand for The British Government should give up its megaphone diplomacy, and be in the lead to discover whether behind the rhetoric Soviet policy will be guided not by texts but by what is realistic and practicable to enhance the prospects of peace in a world in which the margin of safety is steadily shrink-

Nixon beats the press to print

in the afternoon, Mr Nixon returned to Saddle River (driven by Secret Service men) and revised the printed copy. Nine studiously edited drafts later, Real Peace was electronically transmitted to four microcomputer diskettes and sent to the Enquire publishing company.

Each VIP recipient of the Peace will find a small blue card explaining that "this is one of 1.000 copies of the private, limited edition of 'Real Peace' . . . " which is a white lie. Actually, Mr Nixon contracted for 10,000 copies of the book to be printed. His staff, when queried on this particular fine point, indicated that he ordered his books before Little, Brown & Co stepped in with a "quicky" book offer. By then it was too late to stop the Enquire presses. Little Brown will publish its version of Real Peace in January.

"We were all set to send out about five or six thousand copies," said John Taylor, a Nixon assistant "But now that the book is coming out commercially, that doesn't make Nixon's insistence that it be sense. We don't wish to interfere with Little Brown's efforts to promote it."

What happens to the remaining books, which were lining the halls of Nixon's suite in boxes of 200 copies

"I guess we're just going to save the other 9,000 for posterity," Mr

Taylor said.
Far from interfering with Little Brown's efforts, Mr Nixon's actions, whether or not so calculated, exhibit the finesse of a master publicist. In early September, he sent bound galley proofs of Real Peace to 115 politicians, journalists and powerfully positioned friends, including Henry Kissinger and the present Secretary of State, George Shultz Very rapidly, the New York Times Syndication Service acquired the rights to Real Peace, and began offering the work to publishers. The Corp. knows that a mispronounced name causes more offence even than a properly pronounced improper word. And it goes to considerable pains to see that its announcers get the pronunciation of this kind of name right. "Right" means that surnames should be pronounced as the bearer of the name herself or himself prefers, and that place-names should be pronounced as the local inhabitants pronounce them.

Why the work ethic is not working

tators have been whipping up quite a froth over the issue of politicians' moral leadership. Should they beshowing people how to lead their lives? Or is that an absurd and outdated principle?

As usual, a debate on morals gets exciting only when people assume it is sexual morals we are talking about. I have heard every possible view expressed: that politicians in their sexual lives should be beyond reproach, or alternatively no different from the rest of the world; that the public enjoys a degree of flamboyant irregularity in their leaders, or alternatively that anything is permissible as long as it is kept quiet. On this issue muddle reigns in the public mind - but at least everybody has had plenty of opportunity to discuss it.

Not so on the wider issue of moral leadership. Should politicians be setting values, talking about how life should be lived? There is a popular recoil from the notion. Government, it is felt, is there to make laws and manage the economy.

That sounds good. But it ignores. the fact that economic and legislative decisions inevitably convey strong moral messages. And the moral messages being conveyed by those in power at present are as confused as their now equivocal espousal of "Victorian values". I am not even talking for the moment about the Government's attitude to public health and the social services, public health and the social services, but about an even more fundamental and vexing question: its attitude to the work ethic. Does Mrs. Thatcher believe that the work ethic is the linch-pia of our social order, or not! If she does, how can she tolerate that line of millions. unemployed strenching out to the crack of doorn? If she does not, what other sense of purpose in life is she going to give them?

I recently reread Aldous Huxley's Point Counter Point, reparted as seminal when it was published in 1928 and still going strong as an essential item on any would be intellectual's reading list in my own student days in the mid. 1950s. It has student days in the mid 1950s. It has since dropped from view, but it makes ironically relevant reading today. In it the D. H. Lawrence based character, Mark Rampion, preaches against industrial society. One thing they re all agreed on Tories, Liberals, Socialists, Bolsheviks—is the intrinsic excellence of the industrial stink and the pecenity of standardizing and specializing every trace of genuine manhood or womanhood out of the human race."

The barm, he admits, cannot be undone. Workers have got to spend reight hours out of every 24 as a mixture between an imbecile and a mixture between an impected and a sewing machine, humilisting and disgusting though that is. The proper attitude, of, workers, to this, degradation should be to "admit it's thety," hours and then concentrate on being a real human being in your leisure. A real complete being. Not a newspaper reader, not a jazzer, not a

Now while this view of the complete life seems unduly restricted (jazz is definitely deemed these days to be life-enhancing, though I'm not sure about newspapers), this voice, this insistence that there is a purpose in life beyond the jobs rat race is missing today.

For instance, for all the lip-service paid to voluntary work in the community, what status does it really have? Young people in particular have been conditioned to associate it with timetable filling for the lower streams at school, and after school as an appropriate sentence for young criminals. Mrs Thatcher transparently sees it as a way of "rolling back the frontiers of the state" and cutting jobs in the public sector, not as a worthwhile thing in itself.

And what about education? Is the Government's message to young people: "Now is your chance! There won't be work for you for a few years but you can use the time to learn more, widen your experience, develop your skills . . . Not a bit of it. There are financial inducements to get young people out of chication at the cartiest opportunity and financial penalties if they try to get back. The message young people are getting — particularly those coming off government training schemes and finding no jobs — is that it is only the aradicular high flyers or those whose parents can support them whom society is interested in educating. The law does not allow them to draw the dole and study full-time — even if they can get a DIACC OR & COURSE.

I notice with interest that Harold Macmillan has recommended that Mrs Thatcher read Jane Austen. Apart from a bricagacred and dimmishing band – Lords Whitelaw and Hailsham, James Prior, Peter Walter, John Billen, probably Michael Heseltine – Mrs. Thatcher has not chosen men and women for high office because they represent an indiscensable Tory point of view or because they symbolise an important Tory interest.

These days they are selected either because (like Nigel Lawson, Sir Keith Joseph, Norman Tebbit, and now Mr Ridley) they have agreed with Mrs Thatcher all along or because they can be counted on to agree with whatever view she may hold at any given time; this latter group includes Leon Brittan, Norman Fowler, Patrick Jenkin and, the baratigm. What we have interests the beginning of the today is government by place men; and the nature of this Cabiner inevitably affects the quality of the politicians who are appointed.

Place men are generally, almost by definition, people of little quality, and since Mrs Thatther hersolf is an abertation from traditional Tories, it follows that there are insufficient men and women among her parliamentary followers who can combine committed or acquired Thatcherism with genuine ability.

no less shocking for having been predictable. These were not acts of war, but atrocities against peace-keepers whose role is to be non-compatant. It was, however, forseeable even a year ago, when the multinational force went back to Beirgt in the wake of the Sabra-Chatila massacre, that it would not get out again without incurring heavy casualties. Violence had become so endemic in Lebanon, with so many parties involved, both internal and external, that the violence could hardly be ended on terms acceptable to all of them. That being so, whatever force tried to put an end to it was bound to become a target for those parties which felt they stood to lose if it were ended at that time and on those terms. In other words, the force could hardly escape becoming a party in the next phase of the struggle.

Had that been made fully clear to the Americans, French, Italian and British peoples at the time, perhaps it would not have been politically possible to send the force. This newspaper argued, in September 1982, that what was needed was something going beyond a conventional peacekeeping operation and amounting almost to a new mandate to replace the various occupying forces in Lebanon, re-fashion the institutions of the country, and enable it to return to independence on a new basis.

Probably it was unrealistic to suppose that Western countries had the degree of interest and political will to embark knowingly on a task of that magnitude. Perhaps no Western leader would have dared to tell his or her people then that they were being committed to an enterprise in Lebanon in which hundreds of their soldiers might be killed, and which might last several years. As it was the leaders in question pretended, no doubt deceiving themselves in Soviet Union and Iran could be

The latest killings in Beirut are the process, that this was a simple peace-keeping job that would not involve any actual fighting and would be over in a few months, once Lebanon had been helped through a difficult spot.

> That was one mistake. A second, made more particularly by the United States, was to assume that, since President Amin Gernayel had been elected unanimously by the Lebanese Parliament, his policies must. reflect a national consensus, so that in strengthening his regime and his army, and helping them to overcome opposition, the multinational force would be rising above the factionalcommunal struggle and assisting in the restoration of an impartial and genuinely national state.

That assumption neglected both the very imperfectly representative character of a tenyear-old parliament and the peculiarities of the circumstances in which the vote was taken. It ignored the fact that President Gemayel, however well-intentioned personally, belongs to and was all but prisoner of one particular Lebanese faction - the very faction which had carried out the massacre, and other massacres before it, and which was consequently hated and feared by very large numbers of Lebanese.

That is not to say that yesterday's terrible carnage should be regarded as the work of Lebanese alone. The hands that transported and detonated the explosives may well have been Lebanese, but behind them, no doubt, stand foreign powers. If the attacks were the work of the "national resistance front" whose leaders include communists, then naturaly one must suspect Soviet involvement. If they were carried out by "Amal" or another Shiite group, then suspicion turns to Iran. It is not at all impossible that both the involved through their respective proxies, though highly un-likely that they are in direct collaboration with each other.

The question which must be debated with greatest anxiety, in Beirut and in Western capitals, is whether Syria was also a party to the plot. Neither group would find it easy to bring that quantity of explosives to Beirut without some degree of Syrian connivance, but that does not automatically imply that Syria was privy to the use to which the explosives were put.

On this point, two hypotheses are tenable in the present state of our knowledge. One is that Syria is not ready for a settlement of the Lebanese conflict based on the present imbalance of forces, and therefore wishes further to erode Western willpower before allowing the process of national reconciliation to go ahead. The, other is that, on the contrary, Syria, having succeeded at last in getting the Reagan administration to take her seriously, is now moving cautiously towards a deal with the United States - a deal which the sponsors of yesterday's attack must be determined if possible to about. The second hypothesis is clearly the more hopeful from the Western and Lebanese points of view, and so long as it is tenable the most important thing for the West to do is to avoid any action which might jeopardize it. In either case, it is now as impossible politically to pull the multinational force out. Militarily, there are no doubt new dispositions to be taken for its protection. But, above all, the West must not abandon the attempt to secure a negotiated settlement in Lebanon which takes account of Syrian as well as Western interests, and of the interests of the Lebanese communities which look to each side for protection and support. What has happened is a test of Western nerves, but more so of Western

After her victory in June, the conventional wisdom (which may yet turn out to be correct) was that Mrs Thatcher's government was in a position of unchallenged supremacy. The Labour Party, dragged down by the virulence of its extremists, seemed to be in its final decline. and the logic of the situation suggested some kind of political realignment to produce a left-ofcentre party more acceptable to the electorate. The SDP-Liberal Alliance was held to be the most likely agent of such a change. Indeed, the most practical question in the summer seemed to be whether the Alliance could take Labour's place as the principal challenger to Mrs Thatcher before the next election.

The picture today is suddenly much more foggy. It has been changed to Mrs Thatcher's disadvantage partly by her very success. There is a dialectic in democratic politics which moves defeated parties to modify their own position to take account of the voters' verdict against them. Without acknowledging that they are doing so, the rejected parties try, so far as political principal allows, to remedy what the electorate dislikes in them, and to satisfy what it likes about their successful foes. It was an implicit acknowledgment that Mrs Thatcher was changing the shape of the political debate when Dr David Owen accepted for the SDP Mrs Thatcher's "tough" politics of efficiency and competitiveness, albeit offset by a stress on the "tender" qualities of the welfare state.

An even more significant sign of Mrs Thatcher's success was evident when Labour left-wingers began extolling the virtues of houseownership and even council house sales, and when the

So, suddenly the Conservative lead in the polls is falling Labour is catching Mrs Thatcher up and the Alliance is back around its old, dispiriting

20 per cent. In part, this reflects not simply the differing luck of the opposition parties but a considerable hamfistedness in the government's political behaviour, particularly over its spending economies and their impact on the welfare state. When times were hard and inflation threatened to. wreck society, it was easier for the government to preach a simple message of austerity and obtain public acceptance than it is now that the corner has been turned. Public spending has to be curtailed; on the other hand, Mrs Thatcher is rightly committed to preserving the essential services of the welfare state. Having taken so much responsibility on itself, the state cannot withdraw without taking the greatest care that no harm is done. What is. needed is systematic reform that defines priorities in a way that is acceptable to the public. Improvisation may have to do for this coming year's economies, but in the long run that is not enough. Lord Whitelaw's "star chamber" cabinet committee, which has been assigned the task of mediating over public spending arguments for this year could well be given the longer term assignment

The government wants to reassembly is its true beginning. tionally. But as well as the have its cake and eat it, and in a As so often happens, an autumn dialectic of democracy, personsense that is a right instinct. It knows spending must be cut and borrowing kept down if inflation is not to return and if prowth is to be sustained. It knows that tax-cutting, especially for the lower paid, is necessary to stimulate the economy. But it also knows that not only equity but sensible politics require it to take the public with it on spending cuts, particularly where the social services are affected. If it does not, it risks the loss of the third term of office which Mrs Thatcher aims at, and of throwing away much of what has been achieved.

> The strength of the challenge Mrs Thatcher now faces in parliament, and the skill with which she puts her case will be all-important for the government's chances. It remains to be seen whether the Labour Party can pull its warring wings together and whether there is really a place in it for the moderates, or whether they will simply be tolerated as sugaring for a much more bitter kind of socialist pill. On the evidence so far, the left has undergone no real change of heart but merely a change of tactics. Even so, that could be dangerous for the Conservatives if Mrs Thatcher does not carry the country with her, and for the future political consensus of the nation if the Alliance continues to falter. Successful government government not merely by reluctant consent but with approval, which is not to say that a government should debase its message to win popularity but that it should be accepted as governing fairly compassionately and justly. It is not easy to reconcile as many conflicting aims as Mrs Thatcher must now attempt to do, but after all the business of politics is devising acceptable priorites. The flavour of the party battle in parliament this autumn will be the best evidence we have had since the election of the government's chances of success.

Effect of cut in NHS budget

From Dr N. P. Mallick and others Sir, The Government has a sound case in seeking for the efficient use of resources in the National Health Service. However, the relevant Act requires the Minister of Health to promote the effective provision of services for the treatment of illness There is a crisis of confidence in the Government's will to see that this essential principle is maintained. Sadly, this has been evident in services such as ours.

The United Kingdom has lagged far behind most European countries in providing facilities to treat terminal renal failure. Increasingly, it is clear that this situation will be aggravated by the financial constraints now being imposed. Already in our north-west region – generally sympathetic to improving facilities for treating patients with renal failure - the budget for 1983/84 has had to be trimmed considerably.

In our unit we shall have enough money to manage this year, only because of delays in completing essential building work. We look with anxiety to the financial provision for subsequent years, wondering if we will be able to maintain the present facilities, let alone improve them. Particularly for those vulnerable members of society who have difficulty in providing self help, the chances of receiving treatment are receding.

From open correspondence between the President of the British Kidney Patients Association, Mrs Elizabeth Ward, and the Prime Minister's private secretary, it appears that the Government sees the financial constraints on the health service as being of overriding importance. The Prime Minister's private secretary states:

I am afraid the amount of money available for the provision of health services is finite and needs to be kept to planned levels

and further

the Prime Minister appreciates the special position of end stage renal failure services as providing a proven method of treatment for an otherwise fatal condition. However, health authorities are also aware of this and it is their responsibility to take it into account in deciding between competing claims for available funds.

We do not believe that the Government can delegate to lower authorities its overriding responsibility to provide "a proven method of treatment for an otherwise fatal condition". It has earned a secure term of office, but has no mandate to propose that money is so scarce that citizens must die because such treatment cannot be afforded.

The Government should need no reminder of John Donne's moving perception "No man is an island entire of itself. Any man's death diminishes me . . therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolis: 11 tolis for thee"

The numbers game

From the Secretary of the South African Cricket Union

Sir, There have recently, and understandably, been letters from your readers and items by your cricket writers noting with apprehension the prominent roles now played by South African cricketers in both the England XI and in your county teams.

Now that cricket has again moved south of the line" it is perhaps only reasonable that note be taken in England of the extent to which English professional cricketers no less than our own move annually to and fro between the hemispheres.

For more than 100 years English cricketers have regularly come here to coach. In the more recent summers the number has risen to between 50 and 60. Thus far for 1983-84 that number is 66. The cricketers now here come thus from the English counties:

Derbyshire, 10: Essex, two; Hampshire, nine; Kent, five; Glamorgan, four; Lancashire, nil; Leicestershire, four; Middlesex, four; Gloncestershire, two; Northamptonshire, six; Nottinghamshire, nil; Somerset, two; Surrey, four; Sussex, six; Warwickshire, four; Worcestershire one; Yorkshire, nor; and M.C.C. tershire, one; Yorkshire, one; and M.C.C. ground staff, two.

These numbers do not include any of our South Africans who played in England during your 1983 season. Yours faithfully, CHARLES FORTUNE, Secretary,

South African Cricket Union, PO Box 55009 Northlands, 2116, October 14.

Polytechnic courses

From Professor John Westergaard Sir, I wonder whether Mr Miller had and the HMI report on sociology and applied social studies at his former institution, the Polytechnic of North London, before invoking it in support of his sweeping accu-sations (October 14) against these disciplines and their validators.

The report does not charge the course teams with "Markist bias" in either teaching or marking. On the contrary it acknowledges their "pluralism" of approach, while ing this as a source of weakness because it may tempt allegedly unsophisticated students into undue selectiveness of approach as a means of coping with diversity.

If this and other criticisms made in the HMI report raise questions about the validity of Council for National Academic Awards validation and external examiner assessments they raise, to no smaller degree, questions about the validity

Call for justice for police officers

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

From Mr Eldon Griffiths, MP for Bury St Edmunds (Conservative)

Sir I had always supposed that Commissioner that they be sacked Sir, I had always supposed that when a person is brought to trial for an alleged offence, the press and politicians respect the sub judice rule, and eschew comment lest the jury be prejudiced and the trial, as a result, be unfair. I had also believed, perhaps naively, that when a British jury, after weighing all the evidence, returns a verdict of not guilty, the case is regarded as closed, and dants allowed to go free, with no forther stains on their character.

Both these broad principles. whose observance is essential if justice is to be done, have been severely breached in the case of PCs Finch and Jardine. First, by the welter of prejudicial comment made about their actions, before, during and since they were put on trial Second, by the attempt of certain newspapers virtually to re-try them, by "second guessing" the jury and misrepresenting the Judge's summing up. Third — and most mischievously — by the demand of Opposition MPs that the Commissioner of Police should summarily sack these officers, even before the disciplinary enquiry which is now being set up, has met, or heard any of the evidence.

The presumption of innocence it seems has been stood on its head. Before the verdict, for example, Finch and Jardine were presumed by the Liberal establishment to be guilty as charged. Is that not one of the reasons why there was so great an outcry when the jury begged leave to differ - and pronouced them not guilty on all the charges?

Since that verdict, too, these officers have been presumed guilty of breaches of discipline and of the code of practice governing police use of firearms. Thus, one commentator declared that they were "unfit" to be policemen; another said the people of London would feel "safer without out of hand, before they have had a chance to appear before a discipline

What kind of justice is this? It is bad enough that the civil liberties people should call for policemen to be dismissed without the elementary civil liberty of having their cases heard. It is far worse that when they appear before their superiors, the cards, all too often, are stacked

Unlike any other group of British citizens, policemen facing disciplinary charges are denied access to legal advice; they have no right of silence; the rules of evidence may not apply, and the powers of their Chief to punish them, including dismissal, demotion or fines of thousands of pounds, are, or can be, arbitrary and virtually unchallengeable.

This is why, when the House comes to consider the new Police Bill, I shall be pressing for a charter of civil liberties to cover policemen that may be awarded against an officer who has no choice but to use lawful force, including firearms, to uphold the Queen's peace and protect himself and the public from their duty, according to the law and under discipline!

Role of the GLC

From Councillor Charles Williams Sir, The GLC no longer has the strategic role that was envisaged when the council was created. It has neither taken nor implemented any strategic decisions since the motor way box was abandoned some 10 years ago and its existence can now only be justified if it has control of London's economic and physical development to an extent that is wholly at variance with the Government's philosophy.

The object of abolishing the GLC and the metropolitan counties is to reduce control over the boroughs and the private sector and if the result of the planned reforms was that "Government interference" were to be substituted for "GLC interference", then the Conservatives will have failed to reform local government in a way consistent with their own principles.

Without a strategic role the GLC has no justification. It is carrying out functions, such as entertainment, licensing and recreation services, that can be perfectly well managed by the boroughs. Other services will require the joint boards which you

Vote for Gibraltarians

From Mr Robert J. Peliza, MHA Sir. At the Conservative Party Conference yesterday (October 12) the Government announced that British citizens living in the European Community would be allowed to vote in the British and European elections.

In the past the then British citizens of the United Kingdom and Colonies born in Gibraltar, defined as a United Kingdom national for Community purposes", were denied the right to vote for the European Parliament on the basis that they were not entitled to vote for the British Parliament an argument that can only be sustained on the precept that one wrong justifies another

Whatever the balance to be struck here, however, the issues at stake will not be resolved by blanket charges of the sort Mr Miller makes against academic sociology, the British Sociological Association and the Council for National Academic Awards.

Even leaving aside the latest CNNA inquiry into PNL (which was not in the hands of sociologists) the many previous reviews and assessments, whose findings of commendable performance and progress Mr Miller disputes, were conducted by CNAA teams and external examiners representing a very wide range of intellectual perspectives - save only one, the view in Mr Miller's words that "'correct' sociology is Marxist". This is a view which all sociologists of any professional standing, including those of Marxist inclination like myself, repudiate as antithetical to free academic inquiry.

Surely, services such as the fire brigade - where administration is not a matter of great public contoversy or political interest - can be satisfactorily managed in this way? Even public transport, which arouses greater political interest, was successfully managed in the provin-cial conurbations by joint boards under Labour's 1968 Transport Act. an arrangement which will be reintroduced in those areas.

It is a pity that the Government did not recognize that, in London also, some measure of direct or indirect local representation on the proposed new London Regional Transport Authority is desirable. A joint board of 32 boroughs might be too cumbersome a way of managing London's transport, so why can there not be direct elections to the body that will take responsibility for the largest and most controversial item of the GLC's expenditure? That is inevitable because critique of conventional social wisdom is central to their role: critique from the "right" as well as the "left", though it is the latter which commonly attracts demands for inquiry. Implications of a nuclear freeze

From Dr J. W. Arriens

Sir, Lord Chalfont and Sir Clive Rose miss the point about a nuclear freeze. Given the overkill we have at present, the precise modalities of such an agreement are unimportant its impact would be psychological

In purely military terms the world could safely cut its nuclear arsenals very dramatically without detriment to mutual security. It is this which the public has realized and where it is now demanding a political

The problems of definition equivalence, counting and verifi-cation are, as Sir Clive points out, formidable. But, as I myself can testify from 10 years in diplomacy, it is in the gift of politicians to cut through technical difficulties and to ruduce issues to their essentials.

Since "balance" is no longer a concept with any meaning, the precise levels at which we freeze, or how we do it, are not the point. What is required is a statesmanlike gesture on both sides saying that enough is enough. If either side were acting in bad faith that would soon become apparent.

What is at issue is not the precise level or nature of nuclear arms but the psychological climate in which those arsenals are held.

From Lord Mayhew

Sir. David Owen (feature, October 20) deserves our thanks for his thoughtful and ingenious proposals for an INF agreement. They assume, however, the deployment as planned of cruise missiles in Britain and Italy - ie, the failure of the current negotiations. But even at this late hour this could be prevented if the British Government were to show the degree of independence which David Owen rightly demands and which is essential to his own proposals.

We are loyal members of Nato and loyal allies of the United States, but the stationing of cruise missiles on British soil is first and foremost a matter for the British to decide. Moreover, since our assent to deployment is indispensable to the whole Nato project, any reasonable conditions we attach to it will certainly be accepted by the Americans. Seen in perspective, the gap between the two negotiating teams is now absurdly narrow. The Americans will accept - no cruise, no Pershing 2s and no $$20s. The Russians will accept - no cruise, no Pershing 2s and 162 SS20s. In terms of warheads this amounts to about 2½ per cent of the stockpile of the cent, the Russians can still devastate the Nato countries many times over. With so much at stake in political terms - for East-West relations, the Start talks, the unity of Nato, the defeat of neutralism and unilateralism - the British Government should now inform the United States, privately but firmly, that it is looking for a decisive move in the

UK cheese in France

From Mr C. L. Griffiths Sir. French awareness and experience of English cheese is not quite as dismal as your Lancashire correspondent (October 15) suggests. If I can grossly over-simplify a few of the findings of a study we carried out last year for a leading UK producer, I would say that: English (white) cheese has tra-ditionally been developed to be eaten with beer, butter and brown bread or biscuits at the centre of a light lunch. French soft and blue cheeses have been evolved to complement red wine at the end of a heavy dinner. 2. If we ignore the ephemeral hypermarché "British weeks", there is some evidence of the continuing repurchase of English white cheese in the high beer-consumption areas of France (mainly the north and east). This is inhibited by the lower priced, more heavily promoted Goudas/Edams, which are gradually ousting the Gruyères/Emmentals as the basic French cooking cheeses. There is no doubt that classic English white cheese could obtain a significant share of the French cooking cheese market, as the Dutch have-done, but this would need a singleminded. Government-supported, producer-integrated, marketing lead organization on the Dutch scale. A scattering of Union Jacks — à la "Food from Britain" — is not a solution, merely a belated recognition of a problem. At the other end of the scale there are many opportunities for promoting the specialist English regional cheeses, but you need to understand your market, perhaps even to research it!

Predictions that the Church of England would quickly settle down to the new English lurgy of the Alternative Service Book (ASB) have proved untrue: the battle goes on, inexorably. Meanwhile the Roman Catholic Church is about to embark on the complete revision of its new English liturgy, raising all the same questions as those vexing Anglicanism, and new ones too.

These two liturgical crisis are not Heritage, the journal of the Prayer Book Society, contains an extended leading article summing up all that is wrong with the ASB. Its strength, the editor, the Rev Peter Mullen, writes ironically, is its capacity for promoting a quiet life.

Churches caught in a war of words

The racial and religious mix of this tiny Indian Ocean island might seem a recipe for an explosion. Yet for all its problems it remains a rare example of racial harmony, if no longer quite the Third World success story it was in the 1970s. Michael Hornsby

Mauritius is all these things, yet somehow manages to survive with style. Despite terrifying social pressures and lensions, it remains a model of racial harmony and must be one of the least violent places on earth. The MMM was created 13 years earlier by Mr. Paul Bérenger, a youthful Franco-Mauritian, who learnt his politics on the student barricades in Paris in 1968. Sir Seewoosagur was in part a victim of his own success.

During the first half of the 1970's economic growth averaged nine per cent a year, and aging Prime Minister and his The French were bundled out hardly less elderly cabinet were

In pursuing this goal, however, it also became a somewhat fragile coalition of minority ethnic and religious groups – Indian Muslims, the Tamil and Telegu Hindu minorities, Creoles and a sprinkling of whites. These internal tensions, masked to some extent while the MMM was in opposition, came to the surface when the party achieved

The victory of June 11, 1982, was a famous one, the MMM alliance capturing all the 62 directly elected seats in the small parliament. > Taking the blame for economic austerity

Mr Berenger, who never hid his contempt for the intellectual ability of some of his colleagues, also fell out with the Prime Minister, Mr Anerood Jug-nauth, a 53-year-old Hindu trained as a barrister in Britain, Monetary Fund and the World Bank as the price of financial improvements promised in the election campaign.

The final break came in March of this year when Mr Berenger resigned with 10 of his cabinet colleagues. Mr Jugnauth thereupon formed a new party, the Mouvement Socialiste Militant (MSM), which consisted of defectors from the MMM plus most of Mr Bhoodoo's PSM. However, the realignment left him without a clear majority and he was forced to call another election on August 21. For this purpose the MSM teamed up not only with Sir Seewoosagur's discredited LP but also with the Parti Mauricien Social Démocrate (PMSD) of the Creole leader, Sir Gaetan Duval, a flamboyant right-wing

This, on the face of it, was a remarkable volte-face. Only a year earlier both Mr Jugnauth who was the MMM's President (Mr. Betenger being the party's denouncing Sir Seewoosagur as Secretary-General). His main a reactionary old fogey. Mr Jugnauth's new coalition scored a striking victory, win-ning 41 of the directly-elected seats and five of the eight "best loser" seats (a system devised by the British to ensure that every ethnic group gets ad-equate representation.) The Organisation du Peuple Rodri-guais (OPR), which won the two seats allocated to Rodrigues, also allied itself with the new Government, which thus in effect commands 48 of the 70 seats in Parliament. The MMM garnered no more than 19 directly elected seats and Mr Bérenger could only creep back into Parliament as one of his party's three "best losers".

The MMM did, however, make a clean sweep of the four Port Louis constituencies and also captured 46 per cent of the popular vote.

The new Government is even as such, but the Government more of an ideological dog's just lacks the three-quarters breakfast than its predecessor, majority needed to make the and it remains to be seen

A lurch back to the West

After a year of flirtation with leftist non-alignment, Maurituis has lurched back towards the openly pro-Western foreign policy pursued by Sir Seewoosa-gur Ramgoolam, who led the country from before indepen-dence in 1968 until he and his ruling Labour Party were rudely bundled out of office in the elections of June, 1982.

Now, after the elections of last August, Sir Seewoosagur and a number of other old guard LP figures are back in power, alongside their ally of earlier days, the flamboyant right-wing Creole leader, Sir Gaetan Duval, and Mr Anerood Jugnauth, Prime Minister in the short-lived leftist alliance that swept to victory in 1982, who remains as Prime Minister and Defence Minister in the new government, Sir Gaetan's was, perhaps the most astonishing political come-back of all. His Creoledominated Parti Mauricien Social Démocrate (PMSD) was totally eclipsed in the 1982 election, when most of his following defected to the left-wing Mouvement Militant Mauricien of Mr Paul Bérenger.

Most of the island's newspapers wrote him off as a political has-been, but his success in mobilising the Creole vote was crucial to the victory of Mr Jugnauth's newly-formed Mouvement Socialiste Mauri-cien (MSM) and its LP and PMSD allies. He was rewarded with the post of Deputy Prime Minister, and it is already clear he will have at least as big a role in foreign policy formulation as the Foreign Minister, Mr Anil Gayan, an Indian lawyer who held the same post in the previous minority government

Formally, the new Government is committed to the same policy of non-alignment as its predecessor, but Sir Gaetan made clear in a post-election interview with The Times that Mauritius considered itself "a staunch ally of the West" and was looking mainly to Western countries to inject new vigour into its flagging economy.

A change of tack has already been reflected in the new government's soft-pedalling of the emotive Diego Garcia issue. In return, Mauritius will expect increased American and British political financial and economic

Sugar and the social time-bomb

For much of the 1970s Mauritius was one of the Third World's unquestionable economic success stories. Between 1970 and 1976 economic growth averaged 9 per cent a year, the highest growth rate achieved by any developing country of less than five million inhabitants, Between 1961 and 1980 the number of jobs increased by 84 per cent, and those in manufacturing grew fivefold. Eight times more tourists visit Mauritius now than at independence in 1968. are generous.

About 80 per cent of salaries and wages, it is estimated, are spent on goods or services which are wholly or

The need for foreign exchange to finance this deficit has turned Mauritius from one of the most solvent into one of the 15 or so most indebted countries in the world in relation to the size of its economy. At the end of March of this year, the total public debt was estimated to amount to 7,785m rupees (£432m), of which 5,857m was owed to foreign banks, governments and institutions. The cost of servicing this debt in 1982-83 was estimated to be equal to between 35 and 40 per cent of recurrent government revenue. As most of Mauritius's foreign debt is denominated in US dollars, it is appreciating with the increasing strength of the American currency.

The social consequences have been severe. As job creation has tailed off, Mauritius has acquired a growing pool of unemployed whose numbers are now put at about 70,000, some 25 per cent of the entire work force. More than 60 per cent of the male, and about 50 per cent of the female, unemployed are between the ages of 15 and 24, and represent a social timebomb. It is necessary not only to create jobs for the unemployed, but also to find work for the 10,000 new entrants that are each year.

The number of tourists, most of whom come from Reunion, South Africa and France, grew at an annual rate of 15 per cent during the 1970s, but has levelled off at around 120,000 visitors per year in the last few years. Tourism brings foreign correspond into the country, but much of this has to be spent on importing goods and services to sustain the industry. Its main value is that it directly and indirectly provides jobs to some 18,000 people. The new government plans to build four new hotels in 1984 and hopes that, in addition to expanding tourist capacity, this will give a boost to the construction industry and reduce unemployment.

There is no doubt that Mauritius must look mainly to the promotion of manufacturing plants, particularly in the socalled Mauritius export processing zone (MEPZ), as the means of diversifying the economy, strengthening the balance of payments and creating jobs. Since its inception in 1971, the MEPZ has attracted investors from Britain, France, Germany, India, Hongkong, Taiwan and Australia, There are now 25 export processing plants which employ 25,000 people and earn more than 1,235m rupees a year in exports. Over the next 10 years, the atoli was gradually developed by the Americans into their. main military base in the Indian Ocean, with port facilities, warehouses, a sophisticated communications centre and a 12,000 ft runway capable of handling B52 bombers (within range of The Gulf, Diego Garcia was the launching pad for President Carter's ill-starred attempt to rescue the American diplomats held hostage in Iran).

Quite apart from the military pros and cons of this development, what was not generally ment, what was not generally realized was that Diego Garcia, at the time of its lease to the United States, had contained inhabitants, a fact initially concealed from Congress and the American public. The story of the ilois - the creole term for the Chagos Islanders - and their eviction from their homeland to make way for the base did not begin to emerge until 10 years

The settlement of the Chagos Archipelago began in the second half of the eighteenth century, when the French established a fishing company on Diego Garcia and also used it as a leper colony. After the British take-over in 1810, the sending of leprosy sufferers was abol-ished and the population grew, migrants coming not only from Mauritius, but also from Africa, Madagascar and India. LEADERS IN QUALITY

Surrounded by the warm waters of the Indian Ocean is Mauritius. An island of golden beaches, palm fringed shores and kocury hotels.

Prices start from as little as £891 for 2 weeks at La Pirogue on a half board basis:

Following the lovers on Dodo island

Before tourism began to grow and it is still in its adolescence — Mauritius was best known for the Dodo and Bernadin de Saint Pierre's novel Paul et Virginie. The Dodo, stuffed and solemn, is to be found in the museum in is to be found in the museum in Port Louis, the only sizeable harbour on the island and the bell of the St Geran, the ship on which the luckless Virginie sailed from France to rejoin her beloved Paul only to be washed up, dead, on the shore at his feet, is to be seen in Grand Port, I never found a bar called The Dodo, but there are one or two hotels which devote a corner, usually dispensing rum punches, to the memory of Paul and Virginie. Those lovers are still very much part of the island. They have their regu-lation statue and Saint Pierre is on sale everywhere in editions, ranging from paperback to plump morocco-bound volumes for those with large suitcases. It is customary to sneer at Saint Pierre, friend and contempory of Rousseau, but in fact his novel is one of the best guides there is to the island. Saint Pierre picked up the story of the wreck of the Saint Géran while he was working in Madagascar, the nearest piece of inhabited land to the west once Réunion has been passed. But he got his Mauritian topography right and it is quite possible to follow some of the paths trod by the two lovers before Virginic was taken away from her island paradise to the corrupt world of Paris and her subsequent death

Mauritius still reckons itselfan island paradise, and with some justification. Sugar used to be the industry on which it survived. Now it looks like being tourism. Visitors keep on coming, mainly at the moment

from South Africa.

Mauritus has quite a lot to offer them. There is good food for a start. The hotels in all too many tropical islands rely on catering packs supplemented by fruit and vegetables flown in from the nearest slice of mainland. Mauritius is large and fertile enough to grow its own and the markets in Port Louis and Curepipe, on the central plateau, are a joy to visit. Pineapples, papaya, mangos and other more exotic growths, like the pungent breadfruit, sell at a few pence. Alternatively, should you be feeling particu-larly mean, a friendly taxi driver will probably park for a few moments under the appro-

St Géran, originally owned by a South African company, Southern Stin, was linked earlier this year with two other hotels, the Tousserok and the Pirogue, acquired after a take-over bid. The Tousserok, a few miles south of the St Geran, had previously failed to live up the aspirations of its architect who built its apartments out into the Indian Ocean. The Pirogue which features in British Airways packages, on the other side of the island was a much livelier. and more modestly priced anymore, apart from visitors from Rénnion or Madagascar. It is strictly a commercial town where the multitude of races -Creole, Chinese, Indian, African which go to make up Mauritius each form their separate ethnic pockets. A doorway in one street will lead into the courtyard of a Hindu temple while a block away there will a Catholic church. The secrecy of the town was best captured by Joseph Conrad in his novella A Smile of Fortune in Twixt Land and Sea, although he was careful not to identify Port Louis by name. The tourists will head for the beach hotels, modest or grand, which ring the island like the sugar plantations, apart from an unattractive stretch of black pebbly coast near the airport of Plaisance. Some of the visitors will never get beyond their own stretch of sand and they will have squandered an opportunity to go into the centre of the island, which is hugely rewarding, especially the road leading from La Morne Brabant priate tree. The better hotels in the south west to Chamarel take advantage of this and in and Plaine Champagne. Here the lead at the moment is the St. are the forests and some of the

continue to uphold the Mauritian claim to sovereignty over Diego Garcia and the Chagos

Archipelago.
There is unlikely, however, to be any more talk of taking the matter to the International Court of Justice at the Hague, and earlier demands for the immediate closure of the American base will be dropped. Instead, the Government will argue that Diego Garcia can only be recovered as part of a general demilitarization of the Indian Ocean, which would also require the withdrawal of the Soviet Union from bases on the North-east African coast

Even before the Angust elections Mr Jugnauth's MSM, which was formed after the MMM broke up last March and whiled for exercise the manual of the second seco ruled for several months without a parliamentary majority, had reversed a ban imposed by the previous government on the supply of goods or workers to the American base, and allowed some 700 Mauritians to take jobs there.

Despite the more friendly attitude of the new Govern-ment Britain and America are unlikely to alter their previous stance that Diego Garcia will only be returned once its military usefulness has been exhausted. They turned down an offer by the last Ramgoolam Government to continue leasing the atoll to the Americans, on payment of rental, in return for the restoration of Mauritian sovereignty, and there is no reason to suppose they will be any more amenable now.

So Diego Garcia remains a potential cause of friction, particularly if Mauritius's unpredictable politics produce another sudden charge of regime. But the more relaxed attitude of the present Govern-ment in Port Louis, coupled with last year's settlement of the issue of financial compensation for the displaced llois has opened the way for a marked

Anerood Jugnauth, Prime Minister and Defence Minister in the new government, leads the swing back towards a more pro-western foreign role as head of state and replacing her with a Republican president, though this change may now take somewhat longer than originally envisaged.

All Mauritian political parties are agreed that the monarchy is an anachronism, particularly in view of the diverse origins of the island state's multi-racial population, but there is dispute about what the powers of the new president should be. The Government wants a non-executive president of the Indian type, while the Opposition favours some sharing of executive functions between the President and the Prime Ministhe switch to a republic on its own, and it is possible that the differences over the president's powers could cause some delay. Whatever happens, the present Governor-General, Sir Dayendranath Burrenchobay, will retire at the end of the year, and he will be replaced by Sir Seewoosagur, either as governor-general or as the new president Mauritius will remain a member of the Com-Outside Europe and North America, relations with Middle Eastern and Far Eastern countries are likely to occupy a prominent position on Mauritius's foreign policy agenda because of the contribution it is felt they can make to alleviating some of the island's severe economic problems.

The new government hopes, for example, to persuade Hongkong businessmen who are worried about the future of the Crown Colony after the expiry of the British lease in 1997 that Mauritius could provide a viable alternative base for their operations. The previous close relations with India are likely to be maintained despite Mauri-tius's more pragmatic approach on Diego Garcia, an issue dear the heart of Mrs Indira

South African interests will also benefit from the new political alignment in Mauritius. South Africa is the second biggest source both of imports and tourists, and South African entrepreneurs have a major stake in the island's hotel business, South African Airways has landing rights in Mauritius, and Air Mauritius's lucrative Johannesburg route makes it one of the world's few profitable airlines. In oppo-sition the MMM talked of severing these economic links, but quickly changed its tune once in office. Under the new regime, the South African position will be safer still. particularly if, as expected, the Government seeks to revive the economy with a major hotelbuilding programme.

press further claims, despite the no-claim clause. Although the ilois themselves now seem no longer to be an issue, the question of sovereignty over Diego Garcia remains. There is also the legacy of bitterness engendered by Britain's shabby treatment of its own citizens, as the former inhabitants of the BIOT are. The contrast with the treatment of the Palklanders could not be more stark. All British citizens are equal but some, it seems, are more equal

Mauritius is a tourist paradise. It is one of the most cosmopolitan places in the world. Its. population includes people of Indian, Asian, Chinese, African and European descent. All these cultures combine to make Mauritius unique, unforgettable and a joy to know.

It has sophisticated tourist attractions without overcrowding and over-exploitation and few blemishes. It is a breathtaking combination of sun drenched beaches, crystal clear lagoons, mountain grandeur and lush vegetation.

For the tourist there is magnificent scenery with waterfalls and an extinct volcano, all types of water sports, mountain climbing. horse riding, night entertainment and casinos.

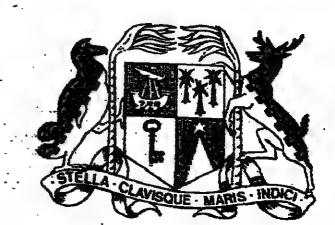

There is a good air service to the island and hotel facilities are up to the highest international standard. Four new hotels are being built during the year ahead as part of the drive to further develop the tourist potential of the island.

Food is excellent reflecting the varied origins of the Mauritius people.

Mauritius has good tarred roads to all parts of the island, taxis are cheap and plentiful and cars can be hired at reasonable rates.

The island is steeped in history having been visited by such famous figures as Darwin and Mark Twain.

Come to Mauritius, the star and key of the Indian Ocean and step into a tropical paradise.

Logica was founded in 1988 by a group of five people, including Philip Hughes, Len Taylor and Patrick Coen. Philip Hughes and Len Taylor, who were the unital executive directors, had already held semon management positions in the industry and had previously worked together for eight years.

From the beginning Logica set out to establish high technical standards and to achieve a prominent position in its markets of high technology consultancy and services. The success of this policy was reflected in Logica's ability to attract expert staff and to secure important contracts against larger and more established

The growth and diversification of Logica have been rapid and sustained. Both turnover and stall numbers have grown every year since its foundation. By the year ended 30th June. 1983 it had achieved a turnover of $42 million. It currently has some 1,600 amployees in seven countries.

Locacz's growth has been primarily from internal development which has been fuelled by a record of profitability and a policy of retaining profits. However, as a complement to this, Logica has also made a number of acquisitions, notably the operations of T.C. Hindson Associates Limited (1972), Freyberg Syst Associates, Incorporated (1981) and Planning Research Corporation (Australia) Pty. Limited (1983).

Logica has emphasised overseas expansion and is one of the leading exporters of computer consultancy and software services from the UK. However it has increasingly serviced its international business through operating subsidiaries in different countries of the world, namely the Netherlands (established in 1973). Australia (1975), Sweden (1977), the US (1979), Belgrum (1980) and West Cermany (1983).

Logica obtained its original finance from Planning Research Corporation (PRC), a listed US professional services company. After an initial period Logica's staff held a voting majority of the shares while PRC's shareholding entitled it to a majority of the profits and assets.

Early in 1979 PRC sold its shareholding in Logica and the National Enterpose Board ("NEB") became a shareholder providing both equity and loan finance. In December 1979, institutional stareholders also subscribed for additional equity. In 1982 the NEB realised its investment in Logica and, as part of the resulting reorganisation, further institutional investors were introduced. At that time £1.5 million was reised to expand

Description of Activities

Logics's activities can be divided into four broad categories, which contributed to turnover for the three years ended 30th June, 1983 approximately as follows:

Consultancy and Project Management Software Products

1983 1982 20 16 23 100 100 100

Office animomation contributed approximately 37 per cent. of Logica's profit before taxation in 1963 (1982 – 19 per cent.) In its other activities Logica analyses its profit by its professional operating units, which encompass more than one of the categories set out above.

Each of Logica's major activities remiorces the others. Consultancy can often lead to contracts for the provision of custom-built software and hardware. Chent projects can lead to the development of new services and products. Product design and manufacture provide first-hand experience which strengthens Logica's consulting capability

Commitmey and Project Management

Logics undertakes consultancy assignments in computing, communications, office automation and management sciences for a wide range of clients. Examples include designing and managing the installation of worldwide corporate telecommunications for multi-national companies, defining overall data-processing policies for organisations, specifying detailed requirements in computing and communications and assisting chems to select suppliers, negotiate contracts and install and manage systems. Management sciences projects involve planning models for businesses and government administrations, such as health and social security, to improve investment and operational decisions.

in addition to its work for users, Logica has established a strong position as an adviser to the computing and telecommunications industries on product policy, marketing strategy and detailed market research.

Work includes advice to major US and Japanese companies seeking information on the European market, market forecasts for European and Australian valocommunications authorities on data transmission and new communications services and detailed product definition studies for manufacturers in Europe and the US. In addition to specific consultancy projects for individual clients, Logica also undertakes multi-client and

The largest activity of Logica is designing and building complex software. Clients are usually large organisations, themselves sophisticated and expert users of computers. Logica's rule is to supply systems that drawupon its special capabilities in real-time control and communications. Logica works on equipment of most of the world's major suppliers of maintiname, mini and micro computers.

Logica often acts as prome contractor for the turnlosy supply of computer systems. As Logica has grown so has its ability to compete with the major electronic companies for steadily larger contracts. Such contracts, which involve the responsibility for managing the work of sub-contractors, size normally based on standard products ed by Logica from computer manufacturers at a discount under OEM (original equipment finaddition to using standard hardware, Logica also designs and manufactures its own special purpose burdware. This quables Logica to address the needs of clients both by custom-built software, which tailors general purpose computers to solve specific applications, and by custom-built hardware. Logica has consistently maintained this dual capability rather than just being a software house, and the Directors consider that this has been a major factor in its growth, distinguishing it from many competitors.

recognition respectively in various applications.

Logica also sails general purpose and standardised software products; primarily RAPPORT® and XENIX.

RAPPORT is a sophisticated relational database system designed by Logica to run on a wide variety of computers. XENIX, developed in the RS, is an enhanced version of UNIX UNIX as becoming one of the world's de factoristandard computer operating systems. (XENIX and UNIX are respectively trademarks of Microsoft and Bell Laboratories.)

Asope of the pioneer's of software design, by word-processing, Logica has been involved in office enformation since the early 1970s. It developed UNICOM an advanced multi-user system, for Unilever. Since then Logica has continued to increase its specialist experision in word-processing software and local area networks. This is used to the establishment of software increased in the continuence and software in 1970.

Market Sectors and Clients

Logica has a wide base of clients from vary diverse market security. The Directors believe that the quelity of Logica's clients and the diversity of the applications of Logica's work distinguish if from the variety of companies which constitute its competition. They also believe that the wide spread of Logica's work over a number of sectors is of particular benefit in that at any one time any market weakness in some sectors is likely to be balanced by the strength of other sectors. Logica's turnover for the year ended 30th June, 1983 can be approximately divided into the following sector

entral & Local Government 10%

Energy & Uninjes 9% mised below by sector. At the end of each sector there is a selection of clients for which Logica has worked during the past two years

Bauking and Finance

From the early 1970s when Logica designed the S.W.LF.T. network, the international funds transfer system, it has had a specialist position in the design and implementation of real-time communications systems for banks. Logica lass undertaken projects involving electronic funds transfer, dealer support, automated letter machines, credit cards and many aspects of communications. In the US in particular a large percentage of Logica's operations is in this sector. In the UK, Logica designed and built the gateway software for CHAPS, the automated payment system, which will operate as a funds transfer network linking twelve UK settlement banks and the Banks of England for same day settlement of high value payments, in addition to working for large international banks, Logica is undertaking major projects to build banking systems in developing countries currently in Iraq and Trusicad. The activities subsequently expanded to operational system. For example, Logica is currently conducting studies of planned major communication networks, has carried out a large amount of work for the design and implementation of new appedo systems, and bascontributed towards a number of air defence programmes. In recent years Logica has attached considerable importance to extending the defence activities into multi-halton projects by participation in consorts for Command and Control, and Communications Systems.

Office Automation

Logica has chosen to sell its office suboration products mainly through distributors, and therefore the market sector of end-users is usually not known. From its early co-operation with Unilever in 1974, Logica has had successive product development agreements with third parties. Between 1979 and 1982 Logica had a supply and development agreement with blezos. Since early 1982 Logica has had an agreement with ICL under which it supplies a modified version of its VTS 2200 word processor, which is said as the ICL 8801 in the UK and elsewhere. ICL has informed Logica that it intends to seek a continuing supply of wind-processors from clogica in 1954. To that end ICL and Logica are in negotiations to extend the product supply and enhancement provisions of the current agreement beyond its expiry at the end of 1983. For the purposes of these negotiations ICL and Logica have assumed that the quantities of equipment to be ordered by ICL in 1984 will not be substantially different from those supplied under the agreement in 1983. Logica also selfs office amountation products through its own sales force in the UK and has established distributors in anyth other countries. To date France has been the most successful oversess area where sales of the VTS 2200 in the last financial year accounted for approximately 10 per cent. In value of total office automation sales during that period.

Logica has recently signed heads of agreement, subject to contract, with a major systems supplier for a distribution agreement under which, subject to taxely product development. Logica would supply a new range of multi-functional workstations together with associated hardware and software products. Deliveres under the agreement would commence in the first half of 1800 for unmittal period of 12 months with 6 months Poince of termination on either side thereafter. The minimum commitment under this agreement would be in secess of £10 million of products during the initial 12 months.

Research and Development

Most of the projects that Logica undertakes for its chemis involve the application of advanced technologies. Hence Logica stays very much almost of research and development in the computer and communications industry. It has formal and informal links with universities and research establishments and it perfumpates in the formulation of nanonal and international standards.

Logica's total expenditure on research and development during the year ended 30th June, 1983 amounted to approximately 63.5 million, of which some £1.2 million was recovered from third parties or by way of grams. While some of this expenditure relates to longer term research activities, such as those mentioned below, most was spend on specific product development. Not expenditure was split approximately equally between software products and office automation products.

In the next two and a half years grants of some £1.2 million in relation to office automation products have been committed to Logica under the UK Covernment's Support for Innovation Scheme as well as further governmental grants of some £0.4 million for software product development.

The major research activity is Project UNIVERSE which is 50 per cent funded by the UK Government. In this Logick is op-operating with The GEC pic, British Telecom, the Science and Engineering Research Council and three universities in an experiment to link high speed local area networks via satellite communications. The Directors Research that this project could lead to exhibitable technologies.

Logica staff tave played a significant role in formulating the Alvey Programme amounced earlier this year by the RK Coveragent. Under this programme 250 million (250) million from the UK Coveragent and the halance from UK industry) is being committed over the next five years to collaborative research and development in advanced information Technology Logica is already an active participant in this programma. The Commission of the European Communities has started the first stage of ESPRIT, a collaborative research and development programme, funded 50 per cent by governments. Logical has midertaken initial studies for ESPRIT and has had approved a pilot project in Computer Integrated Manufacturing.

Apart from research and development expendings which is recoverable from third parties, with minor exceptions Logical practice is to write of such expenditure to the profit and loss account in the period in

Project Management and Quality Assurance

Depending on the nature of the technical work and on the requirements of chants in different sectors, contracts are undertaken on either a fixed price or a time and materials (fees and expenses) basis. During the year ended 30th June, 1983 time and materials contracts accounted for approximately 60 per cent of Logica's turnover (excluding product sales), while fixed price contracts accounted for the balance, ellhough there are geographical variations.

Many of the projects undertaken by Logica are complex or on the frontiers of technology. As would be expected in such circumstances, problems can and do occur with some fixed price contracts exceeding their budgets, leading in some cases to significant loss on individual projects. As the size of projects has grown the Directors have laid increasing emphasis on internal management countril systems and discredines. However the most thorough evaluation and review cannot preclude the possibility of such problems. Although the risks in fixed price contracts, they do offer the advantages of long-term forward commitments and of greater freedom to control the allocation of resources. Longon's overall exposure is reduced by the number and logica's wide range of projects is managed by small units of professional staff, operating as separate profit centres and submitting detailed monthly financial and operating reports. Overall control of contracts is exercised by way of defined levels of authority and in accordance with internal procedures known as "Logica and the profit of the profit e cover bid preparation, contract signature and project methods. Responsibility for developing and monitoring these standards rests with a central department, which reports directly at Board level. Procedures are standardised as far as possible throughout the world by a specific hason committee. Within Logica UK Limited the overall arrangements for quality control are approved by the Ministry of Defence to their full 05-21 standard.

Logics is a leading European independent computer software, consultancy and products company, with an nternational capability and reputation.

The diversity of competition reflects the diversity of Logica's operations. In consultancy and market studies, the main competitors are divisions or subsidiaries of management consultancy firms and the major accommancy perheusings. For the provision of custom-built software, Logica competes with other leading software companies. In the UK, these are well established companies of which some are independent and others are subsidiaries of large international companies. In certain sectors, such as space and broadcasting, competition comes from specialist firms, many of which are subsidiaries of international electronics companies. In office automation the main competition is from international computer bardware or office

Some of Logica's main competitors are also amongst its main clients and Logica may be a cheri of these same companies. For example, a particular computer manufacturer may at any one time be a chent of Logica on one project, on another project it may be a sub-contracter to Logica, while on a third project it may be competing Logica depends for its succession the talent and motivation of its professional staff who come from a wide range of disciplines. Logica's style is an important, if somewhat intangible, factor in the attraction and retention of such people. Logica provides an environment which gives scope for initiative and local variation within an overall framework that achieves consis tency of policies and principles throughout the world.

Logica currently employs approximately 1,600 people. Of the total some 1,060 are employed as projessional staff whose main function is to be engaged in chargeable work for chemis, 340 are engaged in administrative posts, 110 m manufacturing and 90 in sales. The professional staff is highly qualified with approximately 90 per cent. having graduate or post-graduate qualifications.

Logica conducts a vigorous recruitment programme to provide the basis for continuing growth. In the UK the main sources of new staff are universities from where approximately 130 were recruited this year. Senior appointments are, with few exceptions, filled by internal promotion. These is a considerable number of siers or secondments of staff between various operating groups or subsidia

Both Directors and staff shareholders have agreed not to dispose of any further shares for approximately a year after the Offer for Sale. The Directors have also accepted restrictions on the disposal of their shares on a shding scale for a further two years thereafter.

For the future, the Directors have commissioned outside consultants to recommend appropriate share participation schemes, both for UK and overseas employees. All such schemes will be linked to shares in the Company and the Directors intend to put detailed proposals for such schemes before shareholders for their approval in due course.

Logics attaches importance to the working environment for its staff. Office premises are well seled, usually in central city locations, and well equipped. Details of premises, all of which are leasehold, are shown in

Proceeds of Issue, Net Tangible Assets and Working Capital

Of the 10,400,000 Ordinary Shares now being offered for sale, 6, 155, 153 Ordinary Shares are being made available by existing shareholders and 4,244,807 are new Ordinary Shares for which Close Brothers Limited has agreed to subscribe in cash ("the Subscription").

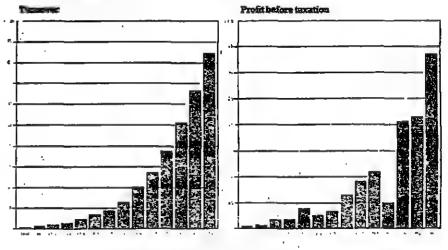

The net proceeds of the Subscription based on the minimum tender price, after deduction of the expenses of the Offer for Sale to be borne by the Company, are estimated at £5.15 million. These net proceeds will be used to reduce existing borrowings and to provide additional working capital.

The consolidated net tangible assets (under the historical cost convention) of Logica at 30th June, 1983 amounted to £9,849,000. Taking into eccount the net proceeds of the Subscription as estimated above, the adjusted net tangible assets of £15.0 million represent 42.9p per Ordinary Share on the enlarged issued share

The Directors are of the opinion that beying regard to the bank facilities available to Logica, as well as the estimated net proceeds of the Subscription, Logica has sufficient working capital for its present requirements.

Trading Record

Logica's trading record from its formation to the year ended 30th June, 1983 is shown below. The data has been extracted from audited financial statements, adjusted where epotopriate to reflect current accounting policies and the present constitution of the Company and its subsidiaries in accordance with the basis set out in the Accountants' Report in Appendix 1.

Over the five years ended 30th june, 1983 Logica has achieved compound annual growth in humover of some 33 per cent and a compound annual growth in profit on ordinary activities before textuo of some 30 per cent. The downturn in profits in 1980 reflected cost overruns on certain fixed price projects in Logica's Dutch.

Logica has a marked seasonal patiern in its results, with profits in the second half of its financial year normally being substantially more than those in the first helf. This is mainly caused by the holiday seasons which reduce the number of chargeable days of professional time and by the major influx of new graduates joining Logica.

Dividends

Other than a special dividend paid to PRC in 1979 in connection with the purchase of PRC's shares. Logica has pever paid any dividends because the Directors have preferred that earnings be retained to finance the future growth of the business. The Directors intend that most of Logica's earnings should continue to be retained but will now recommend that a modest level of dividend payments be made. Following the Offer for Sale it is intended that in respect of each financial year an interim dividend and a final dividend should be paid in May and November respectively.

In the absence of unforeseen curcumstances, the Directors expect that dividends in respect of the financial year ending 30th june, 1984 will amount to not less than 1 Op set per share. Following this Offer for Sale the first dividend which shareholders will receive would therefore be an interim dividend for the current year of not less than 0.35p het to be paid in May 1984, with a final dividend payable in November 1984

Prospects

The Directors of Logica intend to develop the business within the broad range of its existing activities. The UK software industry is widely respected around the world. Logica, as one of its leaders, can benefit from this reputation as it increasingly spreads its international operations.

Logica's existing technological expertise and the fact that a significant number of client projects are of a arch nature should mean that Logica will remain at the forefront of the latest technological developments research baiure should mean that it in the course of its everyday work.

Opportunities for the acquisition of existing businesses in similar or complementary fields are continually being reviewed and, if thought appropriate, the Directors would be prepared to expand Logica in this way. The Directors consider that it is mappropriate to make a profits forecast for the year to 30th june, 1954 at this the Direction of the first quarter of the current financial year was over 35 per cent. greater than that for the corresponding period last year.

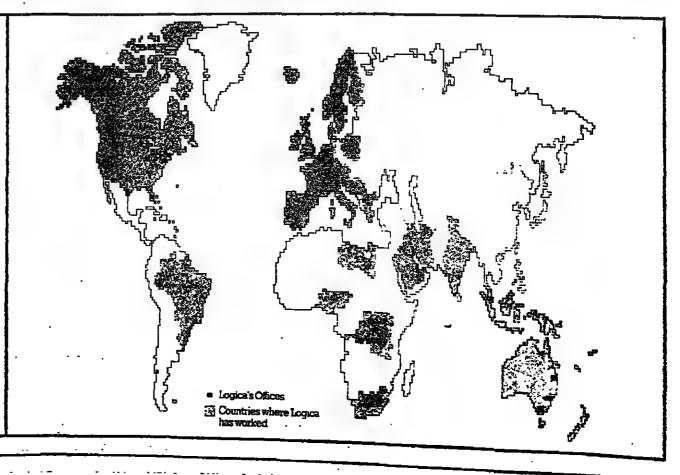

The main markets of Logica - software and office automation - are amongst the fastest growing sectors in information technology. The value of new orders received by Logica during the first quarter showed a very substantial increase over the comparable period last year. The Directors are confident that Logica's technological expertise, reputation, chent-base and management policies will enable it to maintain significant growth in the foreseeable future.

Geographical Diversity

istently pursued a policy of geographical diversification. It has operating aubsidiaries in seven countries, the UK, the US, the Netherlands, Belgium, Sweden, West Germany and Australia. It has undertaken work in over 40 countries to date. Many oversees projects, in countries where Logica does not have a presence, are handled from the UK and Logica is a leading exporter of software and consultancy services from this country. According to Department of Trade and Industry figures Logica provided approximately 12 per cent of the total exports of computer consulting and software by the Computer Services Industry in the

WHY A PATEK PHILIPPE IS THE COSTLIEST WATCH TO PRODUCE AND ONE OF THE FINEST INVESTMENTS YOU CAN OWN.

It takes nine months to complete the Golden Ellipse shown here. Sometimes even several years for a complicated Patek Philippe model. And once the watch is finally assembled and working perfectly, it is taken apart again to be further refined.

Every element is microscopically handfinished to a tolerance which represents a fraction of the thickness of a human hair. Every wheel, gear, pinion and cog is polished by hand until it is virtually frictionless.

Just as most Patek Philippes are handed down from one generation to the next, so are the tools that Patek Philippe watchmakers use to perfect them – heirlooms that have become as precious as they are indispensable.

After 600 hours of testing, regulating and refining to as near absolute perfection as human hands and minds can achieve, each watch is lubricated so delicately that it takes less than a cupful of oil for an entire year's production.

Everything about a gold Patek Philippe that can be gold, is gold – 18 kt. gold – right down to the dial, the winding crown, the strap buckle, and the spring bars that hold the strap to the watch. In automatic Patek Philippes, even the winding rotors are of solid gold, since the additional weight increases the winding efficiency.

But gold has never represented more than 25% of the cost of a Patek Philippe watch. The real cost is in the time, patience, tradition and absolute dedication to flawlessness that makes it a Patek Philippe.

Like any other work of art by an acknowledged master, a Patek Philippe appreciates in value because the scarcity of such quality is growing at a disheartening rate.

Queen Victoria, Tchaikowsky, Roosevelt, Lindbergh ... but a few of the famous who have worn a Patek Philippe. Others wear one this very minute, and constitute a long and impressive roll-of-honour.

Patek Philippe is possibly the only watch manufacturer ever to have a comprehensive book devoted exclusively to it. This volume retraces Patek Philippe's history since 1839 and describes with 600 illustrations many of its rare timepieces.

It includes Patek Philippe watch No. 27.368, the first Swiss wristwatch ever made. It was sold in 1868 – for a comparatively modest sum – to the Countess Kocevicz of Hungary. Today the value of this watch is estimated at $50.000. Or watch No. 761.478 – one of the earlier Patek Philippe self-winding models – sold in 1955 for $475. We bought it back last year, at an auction, for almost five times its initial value which, when you think of it, makes one wonder:

Can you afford to invest in anything less than a Patek Philippe?

Unitary tax talks hit snag

By Our Financial Staff

The British and American Governments are locked in delicate negotiations over which British company should be represented on the presidential working party set up to investigate unitary taxation.

Mrs Thatcher, the Prime Minister, agreed with Mr Donald Regan, the US Treasury Secretary, during her recent visit to the United States that the chief executive officer of the American subsidiary jof a British company should be on the working party.

But one leading British company withdrew after its

It also denied that it was selling the Connoisseur Club the licence for which has been transferred from below a pizza parlour in Fulham Road, West London, to the Royal Garden Hotel, Kensington A new room, called the VIP Room, with a small number of tables has been created within the Victoria casino.

City analysts suggested that these moves were designed to enhance Trident's value before the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report, expected next month, into the bid for the company from Pleasurama. A casine licence.

Mr Roger Pemberton, spokesman for Trident, said of 45 Park Lane: "In principle, it is likely we shall be disposing of it in the near future." Logical secret of software survival

Logica, which is coming to the stock market via a tender offer for sale, should rum-of-the-mill computer software houses. It is altogether a different proposition.

It has already grown accustomed as a rounded operation, rich in talent, to the disciplines imposed on quoted companies through its extensive institutional shareholders.

Although the computer industry has lost much of its exuberance in recent months Logica should still command a warm reception with the realistic tender prices encouraging interest. Close Brothers, the 100year-old merchant bank conducting its first big new issue since the 1960s, and the stockbrokers Hoare Govett, have chosen an enticingly low base price.

At 140p the shares are offered at only 19.1 times last year's earnings. Even allowing for the computer industry's loss of some of the bright eyed enthusiasm this is a remarkably low rating.

The comfortable way the underwriting was com-pleted is further evidence that a much higher striking price will be achieved – say 180p – and investors keen to capture a stake in Europe's largest independent software group may feel that bids nudging 200p may be necessary to ensure SUDCESS.

The company's profit despite a few record, pacomfortable blips, sound enough. In its last financial year it made £3,346m pretax, against £2.159m last time. Once partly owned by the state-backed British

The Savoy group benefits by owning four of the 10 best hotels in London. Indeed, in a recent survey by Institutional Investor of the top hotels around the world, out of six mentioned in London, four belonged to the Savoy. It is spending money on lifts and airconditioning to bring the epynonomous hotel up to the standard of the rest in the group.

'Vicious phase' may blight election year

The Federal Reserve does not face an easy array of policy options at this time. With very strong money growth behind us there is a high probability that there will be an acceler-ation of imilation next year.

And despite the strong performance of the economy in the second and third quarters of this year there are a number of indicators of a slowdown in business activity.

So if the Federal Reserve continues its policy of restraint on banks' reserves - leading to slow money growth — it will make more likely a sharp slowdown in economic growth

next year. This would reflect the fact that since about April, banks' reserves have shown very weak growth and this is now being reflected in weak money

Adjusted reserves of the banks (as suported on a seasonally-adjusted basis by the St Louis Federal Reserve) reached $54 billion (£35 billion) in the second week of April, In the week of October 12, they were $54.1 billion.

M1 reached $514.5 billion in the week of June 8, It was $519.6 billion in the week of October 12. This rise of $5.1 billion in money in the last four months compares with a rise of $25 billion in the four nouths ended June 8.

Both reserves and money have midergone a very sharp

Reserves movements typically lead money movements by two to three months. Hence, with reserves still static, money is not likely to show any significant increase until the new year - even if the Federal Reserve Were to start pumping up reserves growth now. There is no sign this is what the Fed intends to do.

The Federal Reserve needs concrete proof of a slowdown in the pace of economic growth before it will take steps to offset that growth. At present, the dominant impression given by the national income statistics is that the US economy is continuing to show very strong economic expansion. It is, however, clear, that the Federal Reserve officials are concerned about a likely outbreak of inflation next year. Some private analysts be-Some private analysts be-lieve that the money explosion of 1982-1983 will yield as much as double-figure in-flation by late 1984. Unfortunately, the lags between movements in main monetary aggregates and the price level are so long that the likely consequences of a money growth surge are often

Money growth, as measured by the year-over-year growth of adjusted Federal Reserve credit (the assets side of the Federal Reserve system bal-ance-sheet) has be two distinct phases in the last five

From the middle of 1978 to late 1982, the year-over-year growth rate of adjusted Federal Reserve credit fell from 12 per cent to just over 5 per cent. Beginning early last year, this slide was reversed. The year-over-year growth rate of adjusted Federal Reserve credit rose from just over 5 per cent to pearly 12 per cent.

The Federal reserve was able to enjoy the fruits of the wirtuous phase" of the monetary cycle, In this phase, inflation was declining owing to the earlier reduction in money increase in the growth of bank's reserves.

The lags between movements in money growth rates and prices are about 18 months to two years. The lags between money growth and real GNP are about two

Next year, the Federal Reserve will begin to face the vicious phase of the cycle. Unfortunately for President Reagan, this phase of the cycle will coincide with an election.

French Connection seeks City link

In a little more than 10 years he has built up his company, the French Connection, into one of the best known fashion labels in the country. The group designs and manufactures a coordinated range of clothes, for men and woment aged from 18 to 40. The names of French Connection and French Connection No 2 have vecome synonymouss with well-desingned, cheaply priced, func-have designed a complete image ional clothe, he says.

Famous name customers include the Burton Group, Fenwicks, Harvey Nichols, House of Fraser, the John Lewis Partnership, Miss Selfridge and the Wallis Fashion Group. In all the French Connection sells through more than 2,000 retail

Now Mr Marks is looking to make a similar impact overseas. The first indications have been favourable. The group now has a ilorishin gbusiness in Paris and last month opened a store in New York, where it has a 50 per cent stake. The first day's takings amounted to $11,000 (£7,150). Mr Marks is set on opening more stores in the US, but he needs extra cash and has therefore applied for a quote on the Unlisted Securities Market. Details are expected this week.

company at about £19m. But the French Connection's rise to fame has not been easy a point made by the erratic profits record. In the past five years pretax profits have shrunk from £609,000 to £28,000 before recovering to £803,000 last year. For this setback, Mr Marks blames the opening of and stock levels. Now he has brought in Mr Stuart Selwyn from Marks and Spencer to run the Paris business and Mr Michael Shen from accountants Ernst & Whinney to handle the group's finances. The group is forcasting pretax profits of £2.5m for the present year. Mr Marks is sceptical of Britain's standing in the world of fashion and thinks it still lags behind the world's best fashion designers. Still, his confidence in his own team remains impressive, "We are unique, we

Our Gas Fire Safety Check will cost you £5. And it could save your life.

If your gas, wood or coal fire isn't properly ventilated and flued, it could kill you. Because a blocked chimney or flue can cause the fire to produce dangerous lumes containing a deadly, poisonous gas-carbon monoxide.

This can happen even if the fire looks to be working perfectly well-and it can happen to you!

Chimneys can deteriorate, and loose material - brickwork, mortar and old soot - can fall to the bottom, piling up on any rubble which is there already. This can quickly block the small opening that carries the fumes from your fire safely up the chimney-particularly in older homes.

WHAT TO DO

If you have a gas fire, it's easy to make sure it's safe. Call the gas people and ask for a Gas Fire Safety Check: we'll send round a service engineer to make sure that your flue is clearing the burnt fumes safely. Because we think this is so important, our Gas Fire Safety Check is subsidised – so it costs only £5 for peace of mind. This special price includes VAT, and also covers free advice on any further action which may be necessary -although the actual cost of such additional work is, of course, not included. If your gas fire hasn't been checked recently-or if you're in any

In search of literary parallels

The Valkyrie Coliseum

For the second quadrant of The Ring the world turned on Saturday from cardiff to London and became both more particular and more sophisticated. It did not, however, wholly alter. The nineteenth century will, so it seems, be as powerful in the background of David Pountney's production for English National Opera as in that of Goran Jarvefelt for the Welsh. But, since Mr Pountney is the more literary man, in his version the references may be expected to be

Earlier productions by him have indicated a penchant for Victorian ladies in virginal white: here we have Sieglinde as the Bride of Lammermoor and Fricka as Miss Haversham, Moreover the settings, designed by Maria Bjornson, are striking transpo-sitions of nineteenth-century scenes.

The first act takes place in the long gallery of a country house, with the ash tree thrusting up through the great staircase. For the Valhalla of the second act we move to the library, inevitably reminiscent of Jonathan Miller's Magic Flute even though the Enlightenment reading room of that production is replaced by a massive decor of black and bronze built around a giant globe in the floor.

It is quite properly a place of action and observation much more than study, and no doubt will work well as such once this troublesome staging has grown out of such naughty caprices as a leatherette executive chair that squeaks to add to Wotan's worries, or a helmet for Brünnhilde that tips off and clanks tinnily to the

Unless these accidents betray a deeper insecurity. It is around the middle of the second act that Mr Pountney's revivification of bookish characters begins to falter: there are. after all, few literary parallels for Wagner's Valkyries, and Brunnhilde's ghastly costumes - split skirts, thigh boots and winged helmet - are the first sign of malaise.

Very possibly Mr Pountney intends that the Valkyries on masse should be vulgar, and that the third act, set on a war memorial, should have an exaggerated pomposity quite at odds with the fragility and clear definition of emotions in the first. But he does retain his interest in the dialogues, and to make Brunnhilde so unprepossessing goes a long way towards vitiating her scenes with Wotan and with Siegmund.

Marie Hayward Segal stepped gamely into the breach caused by Linda Esther Gray's cold, and so it remains to be seen whether Miss Gray can make the production work.

Certainly it works for Josephine Barstow's Sieglinde and Anthony Raffell's Wotan. Miss Barstow gives us the heroine as hysteric. At first she is tight, hunched, much put upon; at the sound of Hunding's horn her hands fly guilty to her crotch. But then as Siegmund goes into his narration her excitement becomes uncontrollable: she smiles wildly, she mouths his words for him. And at the end of the first act she seizes the sword from him to whirl in triumph before lying down so that he can rapidly consummate their union to the orchestra's closing thump.

Alberto Remedios's Siegmund is bemused by all this but he seems to enjoy it: the voice, now having to be handled with care, still has that splendid radiance, and in his words over the sleeping Sieglinde in the second act Mr Remedios finds a delicate, nakedly expressive head-tone that valuably expands his range.

Mr Raffell gives a decisive and likable portrait of Wotan as ordinary bloke; doing his best, abundantly capable of affection, and tired, he takes up the spear and eye-patch of godhead only when he has to, and exultantly casts them off to clasp his daughter in farewell. With Sarah Walker's fierce Fricka

Attention to man as much as magic

The Rhinegold

New Theatre, Cardiff

far, so good. Of the two British companies setting out on new Rings at the weekend, it fell to Welsh National Opera to play first, and to offer a Rhinegold on Friday that is straightforward and practical.

That, of course, is what a touring company needs. And, if there are to be any comparisons now that The Valkyrie has been presented at the Coliseum, they must take into account the fact that the WNO are working from a very much smaller stage, which in itself must impose caution with the spectacle and the magic, and closer attention

Goran Järvefelt has evidently recognized that Speaking on this page last week, he men-tioned that he had deliberately avoided seeing the Patrice Chereau production, but his own solution to the task of making the Ring real is fundamentally similar; he mixes the mythological with the contemporary, and presents us with gods and goblins in a framework of nineteenth-contury industry.

Since the opera was begun in the year after the Great Exhibition it is perhaps reasonable that it should seem to be unfolding within the Crystal Palace. At any rate, the milieu is one in which Wagner's music new appears as much at home now appears as much at home as once it did on monumental discs that followed in the wake Wieland Wagner's production. The people of this Rhinegold, though, are not nineteenth-century characters, but only themselves. There is, to be sure, something Pre-Raphaelite about the flouncing, skipping Rhine-maidens in watery white and blue with their long, crinkled tresses, but then their scene, which loses most from the lack done more to emphasize the of epic speace, hardly shows this production at its best. The gods are the key characters here, and the designer, Carl Friedrich Oberle, has defined for them their own world by clothing wigging and painting them entirely in cream and white. The effect could be of so many pastry cooks, but in fact to bring out the luxury and bloodlessness of the inhabitants of Valhalia.

\liss

Wotan spends as much time lounging or staggering as he does standing bolt upright. His ravens - a pair are included in the second scene for those who would wish a natural Ring look a bit ashamed of him, although they need feel no embarrassment for the performance of Phillip Joll, who brings simple warmth, honesty, and at times a hedonistic softness to a Wotan who is never in command of anything. Patricia Payne's Fricka does not have to be a termagant; she can be more the comfortable bourgeoise, preening herself when the orchestra embellishes Loge's praise of womankind.

Donner is powerfully sung by Donald Maxwell, and there is a sweet Froh from Richard Morton, who is rather oddly obliged by the production to play the ghost of Franz Liszt. Alberich is more happily shown as a scuttling sweep, his music projected with great force and poignancy by Nicholas Folwell. Loge, particoloured in black and white, to indicate his kinship with both Wotan and Alberich, is sung with lofty amusement by Nigel Douglas, at once a clown and the subtlest of devils, besides being the only one on stage to make the most of Andrew Porter's translation,

There is also an attractive Freia from Anne Williamswhose appealingness King makes it all the more strange that her companion gods should be more concerned with the gold than with her. The detail does not coincide with the music and it fits uneasily in a production which generally moves with the score rather han with any cast-iron view of

Mr Járvefelt has expressed himself as concerned in this Rhinegold with the elemental crime, and indeed he emphasizthat in his use of the Rhinemaidens at the end, dumbly imploring while the gods step over their Japanese-style bridge. But here he merely. and admirably, points up what will make the rest of the Ring turn, as turn it surely will under the vigorous, white-hot direc-tion of Richard Armstrong in

Wexford has had long training in mounting little-known operas by well-known composers, but this year the festival has opened with an unfamiliar work by a hardly familiar name: Heinrich Marschner's Hans Heiling. Touch of supremacy

Concert

London Sinfonietta/ Knussen

Elliott Carter's Double Concerto of 1961 has acquired a patronizing ring over the years, as Carter has advanced from being an intriguing individualist to being indisputably a leader among challenging contem-porary composers. But it came to mind after Friday night's magnificent account of the Concerto at the end of this fine seventy-fifth birthday concert for Carter. For what this piece, and so many others of Carter's, achieves, for all the surface complexity of its working, is to grip you at once with the conviction that this is the work of a supremely intelligent mind and a supremely discriminating

Jane Howell's dangerously lowkey, austere production of this difficult play lays it firmly on an axis of sexual politics - a very promising idea which, with a bolder treatment and stronger cast, could go far. Stephanie Fayerman's strikingly beautiful set, a dead-black Renaissance hall in narrowing perspective, is really a magnificent prison where the princely brothers of Calabria keep their widowed sister "cased up like a relic" against further temptation. In which alone can sustain the this male-dominated society, women's emotional interests Duchess's murder; the Duke rare; and in this matter-of-fact

The Brighton Centre was sold out for the last two days and the confirmed a common trend in money. All those four singles matches had much to offer, notably that in which Catherine Tanvier, aged 18, came within two points of winning one of the inughest matches of Mrs Lloyd's career.

Mrs Lloyd told us after esterday's singles final that "It gives you a lot of confidence if you can guts out a match like hat" (against Miss Tanvier). There was certainly total confidence about the way Mrs Lloyd later dealt with Andrea Temes-- who scored only 16 points in seven games and then retired because of strained muscles in the lower back - and, yesterday, Miss Durie.

Mrs Lloyd generously sug-gested that, yesterday, Miss included, Miss Durie muffed Duric may have been paying many shots that by her stan-the price - in terms of sharpness dards should have been straighthe price - in terms of sharpness

Perth. (AFP) - Dennis Lillee, the Western Australia fast bowler who has taken 335 Test wickets - more than any other player - broke another record here yesterday. The 34-year-old veteran became the highest wicket taker for Western Australia in first class games. He beat the previous record, held by the former Surrey and England left arm pin bowler Tony Lock, when he dismissed NSW wicketkeeper Steve Rison in a Sheffield Shield game at the Wacz ground.

Lilice now has 317 wickets for the state - one more than Lock, who played for Western Australia between 1962-1970. Liller has so far

Gallant Smith is edged out by Dixon

Rod Dixon, of New Zealand, made good his promise to win the New York Marathon at his first attempt yesterday, but he only overtook Britain's Gooff Smith 400 metres from the finish. Dixon is the first non-American to win the men's race in its fourteen-year history.

Dixon recorded Thrs Smin 59xec, nine seconds shead of Smith who collapsed at the finish but was revived by the realleation that his time is the fastest by a Briton. It beat Im Thompson's 2.09.12 with which he was the Commonwealth title in Christchurch in 1974.

Greto Waltz, of Norway, the world champion, won the women's race for the fifth time in 2.27.00. Laura Fogli, of Italy, was second with Priscilla Welch of Britain third

In 2.32.33.

Dixon can be forgiven for not running a new world best, as he had predicted, for he pulled his right hamstring. He clutched his leg several times in evident pain during the later stages of the race which was run throughout in rain. His time was still the teath best ever and has only been beaten twice at New York by Alberto Salazar, whose 1981 time of 2.88.13 is still the morid best. f 2.68.13 is still the world best.

Smith struck out after fiftum miles and built up what looked an amagailable lead, But Dixon never gave up his chase and when Smith began to faiter in the last two miles, began to falter in the last two miles, the scone was set for a Briton to lose a major marathon on the sprint for the second successive weekend—Hugh Jones lost the Chicago Marathon by half a second to Joseph Nizan of Kenya last Sunday. Dixon, aged 33, has been one of the world's leading middle distance runners since finishing third in the Olympic 1500 metres in 1972. But this result will make him one of the long-range farourities for next year's this result will make him one of the long-range favourites for next year's Olympic marathon, Smith and Jones now have outstanding claims to two of Britain's three marathon places for Les Angeles, Nor can John Graham by disappointed with his fifth place in 2.19,57.

The biggest domestic race of the weekend, the AAA 6-stage road relay at Melton Mowbray, was graced with glorious weather. And the standard of the competition, won by Shaftesbury Harriers, was as brilliant as the sun for it re-emphasized the allegiance of middle distance runners to the club system in Britain.

With Mike McLood, Julian Goater, Roger Hackney, Barry Smith, Karl Harrison and Steve Harris prepared to turn out for their respective clubs for nothing but glory – and run under 17 minutes each for the 3½ mile lape – this was the best commettion since the the best competition since the inaugural relay in 1969.

Both Goater and Harris run for Shafteshury, and that is a logical enough reason for their victory and enough reason for their victory and new course record by exactly a minute. But it was not until the fourth leg that Shaftesbury went into the lead through Gonter, and even his run, chasing the re-emerg-ent Barry Smith for Gateshead, was not quite fast enough to beat Mike McLeod's 16.31, which broke Nick Rose's course record by seconds.

Darcy's narrow victory eases Ryder Cup disappointment

Eamonn Darcy, who narrowly failed to win a place in Europe's Ryder Cup team, gained adequate compensation when he won the £60,000 Spanish Open sponsored by Benson and Hedges on the Nueva Andalucia course here yesterday. The Irishman completed his first success on the European circuit for more than six years by compling a final round of 72 for a winning aggregate of 277 which is 11 under par. Darcy collected £9,800 for a one stroke win from Manuel Pinero, the Spaniard, who in closing with a 67 relegated his compatriots Jose Canizares (74) and Manuel Montes (72) to a share of third place two strokes further adrift.

For the second week in succession Canizares appeared the likely hero. The previous Sanday he seemed poised to ensure that for the first time in the history of the Ryder Cup the United States would be denied victory on their own soil. On that occasion he was pegged back at the last hole by Lanny Wadkins effervescency. This time he east away the three stroke lead with eight holes to play with a series of extraordinary errors.

Initially, Darcy, who came to this event following two weeks laid low extraordinary errors.

Initially, Darry, who came to this event following two weeks laid low with influenza, had handed the initiative to Canizares. He was one stroke ahead playing the eighth which for most of its 507 yards is protected by the water hazard along the right side. Darcy found the water with his drive and he eventually took the seven compared to the birdie four of his playing partner, Canizares. Then the elegant Spaniard increased his advantage in three shots by holing a put of 20 feet for a birdie three at the tenth.

Canizares, however, made a meal

Canizares, however, made a meal of the short 11th, Darry took four there but the Spaniard took one more after requiring four shots to reach the green. On his day Sanizares is capable of producing some quite remarkable figures but now he completely lost his rhythm.

holing from 12 feet for a birdle at the 17th. The Irishman fully deserves this victory although by his own admission he owes much 10 Andy Bean, the American, who gave him some advice on putting three weeks ago during the Lancome Trophy in Paris.

The expected challenge from Severiano Ballesteros failed to materialise. Through a combination materialise. Through a combination of health problems and excessive golf under pressure, which have sapped his energy, he lacked his usual bite. After taking a 72 for a share of seventh place he admitted that there was now little hope of overhauting Nick Faldo for the number one position in the European Official Money List, In fact Ballesteros would need to win the last two tournaments of the season, the Sanyo Open and the season, the Sanyo Open and the Portuguese Open to beat Faldo, who has won £119.416 so far this year.

Buckinghamshire ... Berkshire.

Buckinghamshire and Berkshire brgan their county championship campaign by sharing the points at Slough yesterday in one of the poorest games seen at this level for many seasons. These teams howtouthern division.

Those who follow the fortunes of the counties have grown accustomed to seeing a Buckinehamshire side drawn heavily from the resources of Slough and to abserving a player from Aylesbury, for instance, as the odd man out.

The Burkinghamshire side in yesterday's game had only two Slough players, Charlesworth and Davarwal, whose trad-field promptings were not, in the early minutes, put to proper use.

Buckinghamshire had reached the final three times in retent years, winning the title in the 1979-80

Buckinghamshire made a spirited effort to equalise in the next five minutes but a hurried shot by Burrows was thwarted by a stick save from London.

Berkshire's more constructive play led to a short corner which gave way to another in the 27th minute and the first half ended with the Buckinghamshire defence successfully holding off a strong Berkshire

. The clocks in the first division might have been turned back a year rather than an hour. When summer time last came to a close, Liverpool stepped forward to take West Ham United's place at the shoulders of Manchester .United, the leaders of the procession through October's dusk. So it was when the evening light faded on Saturday.

As the current picture comes into focus, it could be sepia-toned, so closely does it resemble the position of a year ago. United and West Ham have collected exactly the same number of points and Liverpool only one more. All but half a dozen of the 19 remnants are following their 1983 schedules, Nottingham Forest and Coventry City precisely so.

The early standards of Ipswich Town, Luton Town. Southampton and particularly Birmingham City, who were well adrift at the bottom. have risen significantly. Those of Stoke City and especially Watford, have fallen even more

After suffering their sixth defeats of the season, they stand above only a pair of nervous newcomers. Watford were far from diffident when they arrived from the Second Division and their style, admired by some and criticised by others, grew to dominate the conversation even more than the success of their fresh challenge. Now the progress of another newly promoted club. Queens Park Rangers, threatens to be similarly overshadowed by a different talking point, their plastic pitch.

Their home fixture against Liverpool was supposed to provide comments more relevant to the abilities of the two championship contenders. But they remained as hidden as if it had been played on a field with the grass six foot high. The ball, with its lively bounce, stayed at that height for most of the afternoon.

Before beating West Ham last Saturday in windy conditions that were more natural and less awkward, Liverpool came down south early especially to practice on the surface. Yet they, the masters of adaptability, remained uncomfortable throughout their first competitive outing on the turf. Few other visitors can be optimistic about their chances of performing

"If you don't deal with the bounce", Joe Fagan, Liverpool's manager, observed, "you're in trouble. Twisting and turning out there is a little bit suspect as well"

He might have added Rangers' offside trap to the list of problems to be overcome. Liverpool fell into it 14 times and sprung it only twice. On both occasions the wall pass was the key. Dalglish, after using Souness on the half hour, found himself with so much time to consider the choices that he allowed Hucker to make his mind up for him. Nicol, after employing Robinson in the 83rd minute, had to be more instantly decisive and scored the winner, his first goal for Liverpool.

Fagan could have claimed that his move to replace Johnston with Nicol 15 minutes earlier had been inspired. But he admitted that he was more concerned that Jonston, booked for felling Fereday, should come off to avoid being sent off for the second successive Saturday, Gregory and ainrod were also cautioned for dissent.

Rangers themselves found Liverpool's defence in which Lawrenson was again outstanding, an even more insoluable problem. They forced Grobbelaar into action only outside

Wherever Rangers finish this season, and they could emulate Watford by walking straight through the first division's door to Europe, cynics will point to their artificial home advantage. Having lost five of their last 55 matches, their record is superior to that of Liverpool's at Anfield and is matched only by United's at Old Trafford, Terry Venables, aware that the surface must be softened to bring the game back down to earth, is growing as tired of criticism as did Graham Taylor last season. Manchester United......

A controversial penalty confi-ently converted by Wilkins in the dently converted by Wilkins in the 18th minute was enough to give Manchester United maxium points and keep them on top of the first division, but the referee's decision that Elliott, the Sunderland defender, had pushed Stapleton inside the goal area, generated so much heated anger in the Sunderland camp that you could almost see wisps of smoke curling around the Roker Park corridors after Saty's game.

The Sunderland manager, Alan Durban, was unusually red-faced, presumably from biting his tongue. No, he was not going to be drawn into cruicising the referee but in the end he went as far as to say that it was sickening for professionals to see a week's preparation ruined by someone who spent most of his time working outside the game.

There could be little doubt that Elliott pushed Stapleton in back, but the Sunderland player's version was that Stapleton ran forward to meet the centre from Robson, checked suddenly, and he (Elliott) ran into

Prince Khaled Abdulla is certainly the owner in the hot; scat after the victory of Alphabatim-in the William Hill Saturday. With the running of the final two-year-old pattern race of the season behind us it is now possible to assess the situation as far as next season's classics are concerned. Not even Robert Sangster has ever been in a more powerful position atthis particular stage of the game than is now the proud proprictor of Alphabatim, Rainbow Quest, Rousillon and Raft,

At $950,000 as a yearling.
Rainbow Quest was the most expensive of this glamourous quartet. The Dewhurst Stakes runner-up must now be worth considerably more than his purchase price, as must also be Raft and Rousillon who cost $140,000 and $100,000, respect-

Alphabatim, on the other hand felched a mere $23,000 at a later Keeneland sale when hought for Paul Locke, who still owned the colt when he won so impressively at Newmarket on Cambridgeshire day, It is, of course, not known how much.
Prince Abdulla paid for Alphabatim early the following week.
But it would be logical to assume that the negotiated deal would have taken into account the strongly possibility that the two-year-old might win the futurity.

Queensland blaze on all cylinders as Wigan run out of fire

The lessons of Craven Park last Sunday had obviously been well and Oldham, who surprised Castleford truly learned by Queensland, who took 20 minutes to size up Wigan yesterday and then romped to a ridiculously easy victory which gave little comfort and few pointers to the Great Brigain coach Frank beating Passage 22.16 but Cardiel he Great Britain coach Frank in the second half a fire among gas cylinders caused the evacuation of the popular side stand, but by then all other Wigan fire had been thoroughly doused by the tourists. Wigan began well with a penalty goal from Whitfield, and for a while they played with spirit and drive they played with spirit and drive. Then Kilroy made a fine try for the winger Brennan on the left, and from that point onwards the tourists grew in confidence, pace and skill while Wigan deteriorated into imless anonymity.

Queensland showing the lightning and running that was nissing at Hull last week, brushed aside flimsy challenges to score eight tries, from Lindenberg 2. Phelan, Miles, French, Kilroy and Heugh, with McNally landing four goals. A good crowd of nine thousand seven bundred and sixty nine were entitled to expect a better assertion of the British cause, and made their annoyance heard as the second half wore on. Hundreds of spectators preferred to watch the fire behind the stand rather than Wigan's the stand rather than Wigan's spiritless doings on the pitch. In the First Division, St Helens dented the title challenge of Bradford Northern with a convincing 29-14 victory, the biggest defeat Northern have suffered this season. Bradford were not allowed to recover after Litherland, 2 and Ledger had scored

Oldham, who surprised Castleford in many continued their excellent run of victories by beating

Hull 18-12.

In the second division Kent Invicts won again at Maidstone, beating Dewsbury 28-16, but Cardiff City suffered a disastrous defeat at York. In a bad-tempered performance Cardiff had Pritchard and Parsecod sent off and were and Barwood sent off and were thrashed by 50 points to sixteen, the defence crumbling against sustained York attacks. The highlight for the York supporters was a try by the coloured winger Pryce, who ran the full length of the field to outpace virtually the whole Cardiff side.

Competitive discipline is blooming

By Athole Still third ASA Masters championships, sponsored by Sun Life, at Nuneaton over the weekend proved conclusively that this comparatively new discipline of competitive swimming has finally flowered in Britain. The meeting attracted over 300 competitors, including some 30 former Olympians, who predictably dominated most of the 26 events, which had been organized in five year age bands ranging from 25 to 75 years and over.

Outstanding among several multi-medal winners was Peter Jarvis, of Retford, in the 55 to 59 group, an international breaststroke specialist of the 50s, who has so developed his technique over the years that he won eight gold medals over all four strokes, plus the individual medley event. RUGBY UNION: NEW POWER RISES IN THE EAST AS AN OLD ONE DECLINES IN THE NORTH

Japanese earn new admiration and respect in glorious finale

Rugby Correspondent

The sun set over Japan's tour at Cardiff Arms Park and a glorious sunset it was 100. It cast shadows of differing degrees, in the short term over the Welsh squad from which their team to play Rumania next month will be chosen, in the longer term on Japan's standing as a world power and the contribution they can make to rugby's philosophy. It is important to place Saturday's me in perspective. This was not c best team Wales can muster and fortunate as to have two half backs of sufficient stature to grace any composite world team. Playing outside their own country, it is vital that Japanese halves move the ball with a speed very few Western countries can muster and that they elect the best options for their side. select the best options for their soc.

Konishi, the scrum half, was quite outstanding, and Matsuo with the refinement of a John or a Porta,

The touring side returned home vesterday to prepare for a tour to the United States and Canada next May ontied states and canada next may and for the visit of the French in September. They leave behind the indelible message that set piece control is not vital if you have the power to mail or, more appositely, what the New Zealanders would probably call hand-ruck, quickly. They also underline the attitude that attack is the best and most attractive

The 32,000 crowd at the National Stadium rose to them. From looking a spent force midway through the second half, when they were 29-10 down, the Japanese surged back and defeat, with Welsh fingernails bitten to the quick, come only by three goals, two tries and a penalty goal to a goal, three tries and two penalties. Wales name their squad for Rumania on Wednesday after a performance which their captain, Butler, described as haphazard and

> It helped the Japanese back into a game which to all intents and purposes was sewn up. The expected set scrum massacre did not materialise – a tribute to the power training and technique that Japan employ - and it came as a employ - and it came as a considerable suprise to find the Japanese leading the lineout count by half time. At that stage Wales led only by 14-10 and the score might have been level had Kanaya gathered a kick through with the Welsh line open.

If there were debits in the Welsh If there were debits in the Welsh forward performance, there were credits behind the scrum. The half backs, Dacey in particular taking advantage of the latitude allowed him by the Japanese tackling, played well, as did the wings, with Titley showing some lovely footballing skills. The centre pairing showed a great willingness in attack but found their defence exposed by Japan's use their defence exposed by Japan's use of the long pass and the lurking presence of Tanifuji among his three presence or I antituli among his three quarters. It was an object lesson in how to beat a back line lying up flat and one which British sides would do well to heed.

Hadley ran superbly for the first try, emerging from defence on his own wing to attack outside Titley, Brown and Dacey put the finishing touches to excellent combined oves which saw the Welsh at their best, one conversion by Wyatt giving Wales 14 points in the lirst half of this match which was sponsored by Akai Hifi/Video. Wyatt's contribution, both in kicking and running was curiously uncertain, both in kicking and running, was curiously uncertain, and he may have lost ground in comparison with Maesteg's Lion. Evaus. Konishi, with a try, and Kobayashi, with two penalties,

Lancashire turned into cannon fodder

Lancashire.

How are the mighty fallen. Lancashire, who lorded it over the rest of the county pretenders until recently, are now reduced to the role of cannon fodder for the battalions from the south. The sharp shooter who riddled their desence and left their county championship cam-paign in ruins on Saturday was the Middlesex and England full back Stringer. His salvo of mainly longrange shots brought him 18 points and played a major part in propelling his side into the semi-finals, with victory by three goals and four penalties to one goal, one try and one penalty.

One of Stringer's formidable all-embracing tackles also grounded Slemen, with such power that the Lancashire stand off had to leave the field of battle for good midway through the second half. The northerners had lost the services of another of their England inter-nationals, Jim Siddall with a broken nose just before half-time and their hooker, Dixon, was sent off for kicking a grounded opponent.

Both Siddall and Slemen kook doubtful for tomorrow's match between the North and Durham County at Gateshead, while Dixon's place will be in dubt if England have

Somerset all the way

Somerset ...

Much the stronger side on paper, especially behind the scrum, Somerset made very heavy weather of winning this exciting division one of winning this exciting envision one-county championship game in the Exeter sunshine by three tries a dropped goal and four penalty goals to two goals a thropped goal and a penalty goal. Devon led for most of the game and only in the final ten minutes were they overwhelmed as form had suggested they would be. They were saved from heavier defeat by the courageous work of their solid pack.

For Somerset, Horton read and controlled the play with thoughtful efficiency. Palmer sparkled fre-quently.

An early exchange of penalties was followed by a try by Simpson after Hill had cleverly switched after Hill had cleverly switched direction. Devon soon regained the lead when Donovan put Somerset in a tangle by kicking ahead and Triggs intercepted to score and Wilson converted. After another penalty by Palmer, Triggs, stole the ball by sleight of hand from Halliday to provide a try for Priday, with Wilson adding his second conversion.

Leading 15-10 at half time Devon, perhaps to their surprise, scened victory and vigorously created more pressure, producing the best run of the match when Triggs kick bemused Trick and Drewett very nearly scored in the corner. Somerset now realised the game was in danger of slipping away from them and having kept in touch with two more Palmer penalties and a dropped goal by Horton in immediate reply to one from Gabbitass they made sure at the end with a try from an clusive solo run

Vacancies remain high in the profession, but

Michel Syrett

Only this month, Accountancy, Personnel, the leading employment agency in this field, announced in their autumn salary survey that larger numbers of graduate trainees

are currently being recruited by firms of chartered accountants than many of those firms expected earlier this year, and that they now earn up to £5,750 a year in London

The survey, however, also went on to state that there still remained more people wishing to become accountants than there are vacancies. Competition at the top end of the field is very fierce indeed, standards are becoming more stringent, and the level of commitment expected from trainees is much higher than most graduates expect. For these reasons, it is important that you analyze your reasons for entering the profession carefully, and ensure that your interest in accountancy is sufficient to see you through the early years.

Your interest in the profession:

Accountancy is first and foremost a practical profession, not an academic one. An ability and a liking for figures is not enough. You should also have an interest in the financial world around which the profession revolves. Are you regularly attracted to the business pages of your national daily? Do you read magazines like The Economist or take an interest in programmes like

The Money Programme! Most important of all, are you likely to be interested in the day-to-day work-

Your qualifications: With the standards set by the professional institutes rising every year, most employers will be looking for a general performance at O level, particularly in maths and English with plenty of A and B grades. They will be looking for scores between eight and 12 points on the UCCA scale at A level, as there is mounting evidence of a link between mediocre A levels and failure in the professional examin-ations. You will also need to possess or be expected to gain at least a 2:2 degree to guarantee that your application will be considered. On the other hand, the profession is open to graduates with any degree discipline, and it is wrong to assume that you stand less of a chance at an interview if you hold a non-relevant degree, What kind of training should you get?: There are four major options. students should weigh the Chartered accountancy, graduate trainees work under a three-year options carefully, writes contract with professional firms in association with the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England Accountancy remains among the most popular career choice. Depite and Wales (Chartered Accountants' Hall, Moorgate Place, London EC2P 2BJ) or Scotland (27 Queen Street, Edinburgh EH2 1LA). the slump in graduate recruitment in recent years, overall vacancies in the profession have not drastically declined, and according to em-ployers estimates, remain at about the same level as they did in 1982.

Cost and management accountancy: cost and management ac-countants are employed exclusively in industry and commerce. Gradu-ates are trained by employers in association with the Institute of Cost & Management Accountants (63 Portland Place, London WIN 4AB). ICMA students are paid during training, but are not bound. by a training contract, which leaves graduates the option of obtaining their qualification through a number of employers.

The Times Guide to career choice

A summing up of accountancy

Certified accountancy; graduates are trained by employers in terms agreed upon by the Association of Certified Accountants (29 Lincoln Inn Fields, London WC2A 4EE). Unlike the other major account-ancy bodies the ACA does not limit its students to training in one specific area. Unbound by a training conract, ACA students can obtain their professional experience with a variety of employers in industry and commerce and the

The public sector: Trainees are taken by local government departments, government auditors, the health service and public corporations. Training is conducted by the employer in association with the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (i Buckingham Place, London SW 1E 6MS). To decide which professional institution to join, you will have to consider whether to train through the profession or in industry (unless you elect to train through CIPFA). It is a choice which will detrmine the course of your career, and yet a large number of graduatee make it without really considering all the options which are available to

This year, careers services report that chartered accountancy has reached an all-time high in its popularity among third-year under-graduates, Hundreds set their sights on the upper end of public practice, despite the fact that competition for training contracts has never been fiercer, and despite the equally attractive terms of employment offered by employers in industry and editation. Graduates opting for a career in public practice also tend to overlook the growing opportunities offered by medium-sized and smaller professional firms, whose standards of training and role within the field have greatly risen in recent years.

Where to look for employers: Employers taking on accountancy trainees feature prominently in the Milk Round. The larger professional firms tour the campuses in the latter half of autumn, and the latter half of autumn, and industrial employers do so in the spring. Vacancy lists are available from all the professional institutes mentioned, and details of prospective employers can also be found in the annually up-dated career directories (GO, DOG, GET, ROGET) which are available, free of charge, from your university or polytechnic careers office.

Questions to ask at interviews: The employer's location: where will you be expected to work? Does the work involve frequent travel? Where to?

Pre-examination preparation: is re-examination preparation: is the employer closely associated with the professional institute which you wish to join? Will they cover all or part of the cost of training? Do they have an in-house regions scheme? If they do not see training scheme? If they do not, are they part of a training consortium? How much study leave will they give in the run-up to the prosional examinations?

Practical experience: if you are applying to a firm in public practice, what range of clients does it have? What activities are they engaged in? If you are applying to an employer in industry and commerce, what are the functions and responsibilities of the department you will be joining? Will they give you enough time to study for your qualification?

Career prospects: what specialist department does the firm or company operate? Are there opportunities to diversify? Does the firm have overseas branches or offer opportunities for secondment opportunities for sectionment abroad, if you wanted it? What responsibilities will you be given in six months, a year, three years? What are the prospects for future promotion to senior management and partnership?

Size how many people does the company or firm currently employ? If itis in public practice, how many partners does it have? Has the business increased, stayed static or declined in the past two years? Is it likely to expand or diversify in the future?

Both the Institute of Chartered Accountants and the Institute of Cost & Management Accountants have recently released excellent videos giving good visual im-pressions of what the work in-volves, and these should be doing the rounds of the campuses in the near future.

 A new series of THE NEW WORLD (ITV 7.00pm) opens with a rather alarming examination of the methods used to accelerate development in the very young. The majority of the research is being done on the other side of the Atlantic where one of the offshoots of parents' understandable desire to give their children the best of opportunities is a glorified play school called a Gymboree. There is now a network of these franchised now a network of these trancrised groups across the United States, earning a lot of money and with the lure of lucre being what it is, they are likely to be appearing over here in the near future. Troops dig for survivors in Beirut devastation

Continued from page I He added: "But I think we should all recognize that these deeds make so evident the bestial nature of those who would assume power if they could have their way and drive us out of that area.

But we must be determined more than ever that they cannot take over that vital and strategic area or, for that matter, any other part of the earth".

Appearing on the CBS television programme Face the Nation Mr Weinberger emphasized that the tragedy would not reduce the American commitment to bring peace to the Middle East and to "put nation". He said the immediate task was to examine ways of making the Marines less vulnerable in the future.

He noted that the US retained a very large naval force in the region, including the carrier Ranger and the battleship New Jersey, which could be used to defend the Marines, as happened before the present cease-fire came into effect.

He would ensure that a large naval task force remains in the area, but he rejected suggestions that the number of treops on the ground should be increased.

The Marines who came under attack were due to end their present tour of duty in Beirut next week. However the Marines who were due to replace them were diverted towards the Caribbean island of Grenada after the left-wing coup there.

The Pentagon would only say yesterday that the force was somewhere in the Atlantic" and that its ultimate destination was the eastern Mediterrannean. It was unclear whether the vessels were in the region of Grenada or heading across the

The deaths of so many American servicemen are bound to add fuel to the debate in America about whether the Marines should remain in Lebanon.

Until yesterday the death toll had stood at seven, mainly the result of shelling by leftist Muslim groups before the ceasefire came into effect or by sniper fire. For many Americans that toll was already too

Recent polls have shown that a majority of Americans believe that the US has no business to be in Lebanon and that the Marines should be pulled out.

The massive explosion totally destroyed the building, crushing many, perhaps most, of those inside to death. The blast was so enormous that it was felt well over a mile away and left a crater beneath the ruins 20ft deep and 40ft wide.

As Marines from other devastation and beard screams approaching the nine-storey French paratroop company headquarters to the north. It pushed past filmsy barri-

National Day

Zambia celebrates as its National Day today, the anniversary of its gaining independence on October 24, 1964. Less than a year before. Northern Rhodesia, as Zambia was called, had achieved self-government upon the dissolution of the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland. Zambia's multi-party Constitution was replaced in 1973 by one providing for a one-party state under the United National Independence Party.

The papers

The Observer yesterday, while cautioning that the High Court ruling on the British Telecom privatization dispute must not be seen as a green light for unions to discapt Government plans, argued that the ar ion was not presented to that the a ton was not presented to frustrate: "utiliament's wishes but was mutivated by union members' The most realistic strategy for unious, the newspaper, said, was now to negotiate firm deals on pay with the new private ownerships to safeguard their members' interests and to ensure greater efficiency. The anti-nuclear demonstration

The anti-nuclear demonstrations were seen by The Sunday These as the "last great gasp of a campaign which has clearly failed". With Cruise missiles firmly in place, the Kremlin would realize that the European nuclear balance was in equilibrium, and there was no equilibrium, and there was no enterprise to large negotiated reductions on both sides.

The Sunday Telegraph concluded that the deployment of Cruise missiles would mark the failure of the Soviet Union's greatest contrast the Soviet Union's greatest postwar propaganda campaign and form the basis for agricus negotiations to replace the past few months of "shadow-boxing".

Discussing Mr Harold Macmillan's recent mievision interview and his remark that a little bit of inflation was a good thing. The Mall on Sunday disagreed, supporting the Governments' present stance; but it wished it could argue the case "with as much charm as the Supermac still presents his falla-cious one"
